VISITS TO ECHO BRIDGE

For another afternoon's drive let us take the Auburndale station as a starting place and first let us turn to the right and go up Central Hill. This road, while the central street in the village, really leads no where, but it extends from the Boulevard to the top of the hill with many pleasant homes on its borders. At the left, as we go up, we find the Centenary Methodist Church, the home of many interesting people in the past, and at present working most efficiently under its new pastor, Mr. Harper.

Passing on, we reach the top of the hill, and leaving the car, walk along the ridge by a little path to "Cooley's Look Off." Here the boat houses lie at our feet; the Recreation Grounds; the pretty Riverside station of the B. & A. R. R. and the wonderful Charles River winding in and out—a very fine view.

The large modern dwelling on the right near us, is the home of Dr. Francis E. Clarke, the father of the worldwide Christian Endeavor Movement, but is not at present occupied by him.

On the right stands the home of the late Capt. Ranlett, who lived to pass his 100th birthday in this beautiful spot.

This hill is noted for its good coasting in winter so we will now coast down and turn to the right at Woodland Road, passing the handsome Colonial Congregational Church among its Chestnut trees and past Lasell Seminary on the bluff at the right. Woodland Road is another of the streets peculiar to Auburndale, which are just passageways or cross-cuts but not through streets, and at the end of Woodland Road we reach Washington street, a very long thoroughfare where are the car tracks of the Middlesex & Boston Street Railway with cars from Newton to Framingham.

At the junction of Woodland Road and Washington street, on the right is the Woodland Park School, formerly the Woodland Park Hotel. This is a large school for younger girls, and is under the same management as Lasell Seminary. The grounds are beautifully laid out, and the buildings in the best of taste.

Driving on, we pass the Woodland Golf Club, occupying at present the

AT PLEASANT BAY

The race held on Saturday, July 29th, at the Chatham Country Club, around the Pleasant Bay Course, was a team race, the twenty boats entered being divided into teams from Chatham, North Chatham and Pleasant Bay. The team from Pleasant Bay scored the largest average of points, followed closely by the Chatham team, and the North Chatham team third. The Camp Quanset boat, sailed by Mrs. James B. Melcher of Newton Centre, and assisted by Captain A. Irving Doane and Mr. James B. Melcher, finished first in two hours, eighteen minutes and fifteen seconds, nine minutes ahead of the second boat, owned by Dr. Hill of Pleasant Bay. Mr. Yeauw of the Chatham team finished third, Miss Bartow of the North Chatham team fourth, and Mr. Oscar Nickerson of Pleasant Bay, fifth. Pennants were awarded as usual for the first five positions and a special prize to each boat in the winning team. The wind was light and from the east.

The race for local helmsman was held at the Chatham Country Club over the Pleasant Bay Course, on Sunday morning, July 30th, in a light southeast breeze. There were fourteen boats entered in the race, twelve of them finishing. The first boat made the two laps around the course in two hours and sixteen minutes. Mr. Benjamin Bassett of Chatham in Boat No. 22 finished first, Captain A. Irving Doane in the Camp Quanset boat, second, and Mr. Freeman Higgins in Boat No. 24, third. Prizes of $10.00, $5.00 and $2.00 were awarded to the first three skippers.

DEATH OF DR. TALBOT

Dr. George H. Talbot of Newtonville passed to a well earned rest on Friday of last week. He was the son of Mary Hicknell and George B. Talbot, and was born in Norwood, Mass., on November 19, 1853. He was educated in the public schools and graduated from Boston University School of Medicine in 1882.

He began the practice of medicine in Bellows Falls, Vermont, and while there met and married Miss Jessie E. Randall. He came to Newtonville in 1888, where he continued the practice of medicine until March 1920, when a stroke of apoplexy resulting in partial paralysis incapacitated him from further professional work. He died July 28, 1922.

Dr. Talbot was a fine example of that type fast becoming obsolete, the family physician. He was truly the physician, counselor and friend of all his patients. His medical knowledge was reinforced by an underlying sound common sense which enabled him to see and differentiate between the essential and the nonessential facts in any case. His personality, gracious, direct and whole hearted inspired every one with whom he came in contact, with confidence in him.

At the outbreak of the war, being too old for active service himself he again assumed the entire care of his professional work, in order to release his associate for active service in the war. As is generally known he and Mrs. Talbot gave up their home at 306 Walnut street, to the American Red Cross for their headquarters during the war.

He is survived by his wife and two daughters, Mrs. William S. Carleton of Newton Centre and Mrs. John C. Dewey, Jr., of Brookline.

Funeral services were held at the home of his daughter, Mrs. William S. Carleton, 20 Rice street, Newton Centre, on Monday, July 31, at 2:00 P. M. Rev. Edward T. Sullivan of Trinity Church officiating. The honorary pall bearers were: Dr. George B. Rice, Dr. N. Emmons Paine, Dr. M. W. Emerson, Dr. Fred W. Percy, Dr. John P. Sutherland, Dr. F. W. Colburn, Dr. W. O. Hunt, Dr. H. P. Bellows, Dr. David W. Wells, Dr. John L. Coffin, Dr. George

DEATH OF JUDGE COPELAND

After a long illness resulting from a stroke of paralysis Judge Frank M. Copeland of Newton, Mass., died at the Phillips House, Boston, Mass., on August 1st.

He was born in Mansfield, Mass., on April 19, 1854, the oldest child of the late Almon and Elizabeth Allen Copeland. He prepared for college at Walker's Home School in Foxboro and graduated from Marietta College (Ohio) in 1875. After graduation he taught in Foxboro and Mansfield and for several years was principal of the Mansfield High School. He graduated from the Boston University School of Law in the class of 1884, and was admitted to the Suffolk Bar in 1883. Since 1886 he has been associated with Fred H. Williams in the practice of law in Boston under the firm name of Williams & Copeland. He has resided in Newton since 1891 and was appointed Special Justice of the Police Court of Newton, now the District Court of Newton, in October, 1903, but resigned from that office because of ill health in the autumn of 1921. He was a member of the Bar Association of the City of Boston, Middlesex Bar Association and for many years was active in the Newton Club, and the Albemarle Golf Club. He was a member of Saint John's Lodge, A. F. & A. M., of Boston, which he served as Secretary for nearly twenty years, and was also a member of Saint Andrew's Royal Arch Chapter of Boston and Gethsemane Commandery of Newton.

He leaves a brother, William A. Copeland, Esq., of Mansfield, at whose home the funeral services are being held this afternoon.

Contributed by and Published at the Request of the Newton W. C. T. U.

SAYS PROHIBITION IS BOON TO BOSTON

Theories regarding the practical benefit of prohibition have been boiled down into sober, hard facts by Elizabeth Tilton, chairman of the committee to investigate results of prohibition for the Family Welfare Society of Boston, in the current number of the World's Work. The writer proves her points by tables of statistics that show that even during the serious period of unemployment of 1920-21, conditions were much better among families than in a similar period in 1914-15.

Fewer families cared for by public charities, fewer delinquent children in the juvenile courts, fewer deaths from alcoholism, fewer suicides and fewer cases of non support to place the burden of supporting the family upon the commonwealth, and increased deposits in savings banks, these are a few of the instances that the writer quotes, with a pen dripping with authority.

"The material I shall use has all been drawn from Massachusetts," so the writer states, "a state that was not dry before prohibition and one that has not, at the present writing 'come in out of the wet' by passing a state prohibition code in harmony with the federal law. The state courts and state officials therefore have not been added completely to the forces in operation in support of the prohibition amendment.

Uses Police Records to Show Improvement

"For a comparison I have chosen two similar periods—the periods of business depression in 1914-15 and 1920-21. The latter depression is much the worse of the two as can be simply demonstrated by two typical percentages. In December, 1915, 8.6 per cent. of the organized wage-earners covered by the returns were unemployed, in December, 1921, 27.3 per cent. Arrests of course can not all be attributed to alcohol, but everyone will admit that alcohol has always had a bearing on them. It is interesting to note therefore, that arrests for the entire state of Massachusetts were 15 per cent. less during the serious depression of 1921 than during the less serious depression of 1915. That refers to arrests for every offence.

"Let us turn from general arrests to those specifically related to our subject—that is, to arrests for drunkenness. Here the arrests for the state totalled 106,146 in 1915 and 59,585 in 1921, a decrease of 43 per cent.

"While arrests on all charges decreased 15 per cent., arrests for drunkenness increased 43 per cent. The reasons for this great increase in arrests may only be answered by guess. But is it not reasonable to suppose that it was caused in part at least, by the fact that something had happened to liquor that had not happened in 1915? In short, prohibition had struck down the open traffic and the saloon. Liquor had become somewhat harder to get and much more expensive. That there was still much liquor abroad is evidenced by the number of drunks left. But a reform that in its early, struggling stage in a period when it must make war on an organized illicit traffic, cut arrests nearly in half, is not a total failure nor a complete farce. Some, at least have come in out of the wet."

Regarding the deductions made from reports of various welfare societies, the writer goes on to say: "The Boston Family Welfare Society, formerly the Boston Associated Charities, reports that during 1915-16 in 26 per cent. of the cases that came to its attention, drink was a factor, while in seven months during 1921, but 2.05 per cent. had any connection with drink. This shows a decrease of 90 per cent. of cases in which drink figures.

"Again, the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children shows that out of a study made of 144 families, 167 children had to be removed in 1916, while in 1921 only 16 had to be removed from their homes—a decrease of 90 per cent.

"In Cambridge, the Family Welfare Union reports drink as a factor in 24 per cent. of its cases in 1915 and but 1 per cent. of 1921.

"The Washington Home, an institution that receives alcoholics 'tapering off,' from all over the eastern portion of Massachusetts, shows a decrease of 27 per cent. between 1915 and 1921 in the number admitted.

"In the case of deaths from alcoholism, the state figures for 1921 are not available, so in this instance I shall use the figures for the city of Boston. Deaths from alcoholism in 1915 numbered 109; in 1921 that figure had been cut to 69 a decrease of 35 per cent.

"Taking juvenile delinquency we find the following story. Here I am giving the whole table, for any one with imagination can see in it what a home does for a child. Note here how the peak was reached during the war years when the fathers were away and the mothers were in the factories. See the trouble return to normal when the father and mother went into the home again and stayed there.

"Decrease in 1921 over 1915, 9.2 per cent. (The Boston figures are given rather than state figures, by advice of Herbert Parsons, commissioner of probation, as courts for children have long been established in Boston. This is not true of the state.)

"In indoor and outdoor relief given by the state department of public welfare we have again a matter in which drink plays a part, but how great a part cannot be accurately gauged by the figures given out. But in this department we find the same curious phenomenon—less relief given, even though unemployment is greater.

"In cases of non-support both those placed in institutions and those placed on probation show a decrease—the aggregate decrease being 18 per cent.

"We come now to the realm of vital statistics—to diseases in which alcohol is granted to be a predisposing cause. In cirrhosis of the liver (deaths) the decrease is 47 per cent.; Bright's disease (deaths), 9 per cent.; pneumonia (deaths), 51 per cent.; tuberculosis (deaths), 23 per cent.

"Coming to suicides we find a decrease of 8 per cent.

"Lastly we come to the number of deposit accounts in savings banks between the two economic depressions. Remembering that in 1921 the percentage of unemployment was larger than in 1915, it is remarkable to report that there were, in 1921, 239,239 more savings account deposits than in the milder depression of 1915—an increase of 9 per cent.

Noted International Lawyer Says Liquor Law Violators Menace Constitution

In a recent address before graduates of Syracuse University, Syracuse, N. Y., Mr. Louis Marshall, noted international lawyer, denounced the violators of the Eighteenth Amendment in private and social life, not from the standpoint of a reformer or prohibitionist, but on the ground that an attitude of contempt endangered the sacredness of the Constitution.

According to the New York Sun, Mr. Marshall asserted that "the habit had sprung up in colleges throughout the country within the last few years of deriding in radical fashion the rigid limitations of our government, and pointed out at length the misconception of the majority regarding the document on which the safety of our nation depends."

ANOTHER POSSIBLE COEUR DE ALEUE

It is reported that the Capital Prize Mining Corporation has secured control of one compact body, made up of fourteen patented claims, situated in the Bull Run District of the Centennial Range. These claims cover two distinct vein systems about 10,000 feet in length.

In the Tuscarora District the company has secured three patented lode claims.

After a careful survey, made by J. F. Parsons, of the two fields, the properties were acquired and the Capital Prize Mining Corporation of Tuscarora, Nevada, was then incorporated to place in active operation these seven-teen properties.

The following is an extract from a letter to the First National Bank of Elko, Nevada:

"Resident Directors of Capital Prize Mining Corporation and United Revenue Mines Corporation, Greathouse, Hesson, Keyser Parsons and Talbot are well known, reliable business men. Parsons, President and manager is one of the best informed mining men in the State, says properties are O.K. There is estimated to be upwards of 10,000,000 tons of ore."

NORUMBEGA PARK

During the present season patrons of Norumbega Park have evinced great interest in the attraction furnished by Mazie Lunette in her aerial slide from the top of the water tower to the roof of the casino. Miss Lunette expressed disappointment when she first came to the park that a longer and more perilous slide was not possible.

At length the management listened to her appeal and a slide has been arranged that will be given on Saturday, Aug. 5, for the first time and which will prove to be a thriller in every sense. The cable has been stretched from a tower that extends 30 feet above the roof of the Theatre over the trees and the cages of the zoo, across the river to the Weston shore. Down this long and steep incline the dainty little aerialist will flash twice each day.

For the theatrical attraction next week Hoyt's Musical Revue, one of the best of the summer "girl" shows, has been booked and in accordance with the usual Norumbega custom will present two shows. The first of these will be "Hello Broadway," which on Thursday, will give way to "Wine, Women and Song." The company includes Lew Brems, late of one of the Henry W. Savage attractions, Felix Martin, Jack Sheehan, Frank Soper, Madeline Buckley, Rose Emmett and others together with a chorus that eclipses anything seen this year at the Auburndale resort.

A VISIT TO ECHO BRIDGE

former Crandall Estate, but with its fine new brick buildings far on the way to completion. This is one of the best known Golf Clubs in the country. Next to these grounds is the pretty little Woodland Station which makes the Club very accessible to its members. On the left, after crossing the railroad bridge is the Newton Hospital, hidden in the trees and pine groves. Although it bears the name of the Newton Hospital, the City of Newton, as we understand it, does not have a hospital of its own, but prefers to pay this private institution to care for its patients and allows it to use its name. Driving on we come to the Great Sign Boards where Beacon Street begins its way towards Waban and Old. It was originally called the Old Sherborn road and was one of the earliest streets. The city has spent a great deal of thought upon this part of our road. The grade was originally much higher and we can observe on our right hand where the original level used to be. This was such a steep and rugged country, history tells us that the first surveyors for a road became discouraged and stopped here saying that there would never be a need of a road any farther, no one would be using it. Some other day we will follow this road, but today we pass on and just as we enter Newton Lower Falls before crossing the Charles River we come to Quinobequin Road. This is a lovely new street laid out on the border of the Charles River by the Metropolitan Park Commission. It is not very wide but is safe with a careful driver, and has many windings and many beautiful vistas. While this is destined at some future time to be a favorite residence street, there are few dwellings upon it as yet, and only the left side can ever be built upon. A distance of two miles more or less brings us out to Boylston street at Newton Upper Falls, where we find the Boston and Worcester street railway.

This Quinobequin road is a very convenient as well as pleasant street for it gives a short road to the Lower Falls from the Upper Falls and is becoming a favorite drive.

Continuing across Boylston street we take a rough little way called Ellis street and come to Echo Bridge. This is a magnificent piece of engineering yet many and many of the residents of Newton have never seen it or even heard of it. It is a wonderful stone aqueduct on which the Sudbury River water is carried across the Charles River on its way to the Chestnut Hill Reservoir for Boston.

"It was built in 1876 and is 500 feet long with five arches of 37 feet span; one of 28 feet, and the great arch over the river 130 feet in span, with a radius of 69 feet and a height of 51 feet above the stream of 70 feet to the top."

We drive off Ellis street and walk down to a small platform on the bank of the stream, and here we find a wonderful echo, which responds 18 or 20 times, reverberating like a sweet-toned bell. The favorite word "July" after shouting is considered "July." After this we walk back to the top of the bridge over Ellis street and by a short flight of steps get to the top of the bridge where there is a fine view up and down the stream. If we like walking we cross the bridge and in the forest on the other side of the river we come to Hemlock Gorge, a very beautiful wild forest, which has been appropriated by the Metropolitan Park Commission and is open to the public. We can perhaps walk along the bank of the river and have the automobile left around to the dam on Boylston street where we can meet it, and this is a fine place for a picnic.

From here we can follow the car line to Wellesley Hills, and as far as we like. One way is to cross the railroad bridge at Wellesley Hills and then turn to the right and come around towards Weston, thus reaching the Riverside or Weston Bridge as detailed in Drive No. 2. This is Drive No. 3 and while it could be made a short drive, by spending some time at Hemlock Gorge and vicinity it could be used for a picnic drive as well.

The Board of Health has acted wisely in requesting the city government to require the restraining of all dogs in the city. Over 60 rabid dogs have been reported in Greater Boston, with 11 in our own city and there have been also a number of cases taking the Pasteur treatment. The restraining order is a measure of precaution which everyone will commend.

The aldermen have followed the usual custom and transferred $100,000 from the Excess and Deficiency account to the treasury as an aid in keeping down the tax rate.

NATIONAL METHODIST CHURCH

RAMBLING about the so-called "old" section of our national capital one Sunday morning, my attention was attracted to a church which, outwardly, looked but little different than hundreds of other houses of worship which are scattered promiscuously across our broad land and are representative of numerous denominations of religious belief, except for its peculiarly slender and graceful spire.

Approaching this thus distinguished edifice, the air suddenly filled with colorful and pleasing tone, as, from up in the steeple, a chime of ten rare bells called the faithful to devotion. Entering, I learned that this historic structure was none other than The National Methodist church. After service, I was told and shown how a former bishop and beloved worshiper had immensely enriched it and endeared its memory by unusual contributions collected on their travels in foreign lands.

For instance, some of the marble tiles in the vestibule were brought all the way from the ruins of Solomon's temple in Jerusalem; the keystone in the arch above the pulpit was carved from a stone carried from the ruins of the same far-off temple, and the beautiful pulpit and highly-polished altar rail are partially made from the logs of olive wood, transported from the Garden of Gethsemane and Mount of Olives. An ivy vine which tightly attached itself to the east wall of this old edifice was grown from a slip taken from the tomb of Martin Luther, at Wittenberg, Germany.

Presidents Grant and McKinley, Vice Presidents Cofax and Fairbanks, General John A. Logan and many other men prominent in the affairs of the nation, have worshiped at this shrine.

THE U. S. NAVAL ACADEMY

UNCLE SAM'S great training school for the development of the geni who are to guide the destinies of the American navy was founded in the year 1845.

It is located at Annapolis, the quaint little capital city of the state of Maryland, which, to this day, retains a distinctly English flavor—on a tract of land where formerly stood Fort Severn. Its position on the River Severn, which connects it with the Chesapeake bay, is both a fitting and an advantageous one.

When the Civil war broke out a change of location was considered advisable and the academy was moved to Newport, R. I. In 1865 it was moved back to Annapolis.

Since 1898 most of the buildings have either been enlarged or reconstructed and many new ones have been built. Today this academy is considered the best-equipped and handsomest naval institution of learning in the entire world.

The present course, much of which is usually spent at sea, requires four years to complete. After graduation a midshipman is commissioned an ensign in the navy and assigned to regular service.

THE NEW YORK AQUARIUM

BATTERY PARK, at the foot of Broadway holds what is our largest aquarium. It contains 100 tanks and seven floor pools and is equipped so that sea water may be heated in winter (for tropical fish) and fresh water cooled in summer.

Circular in form, this building has a unique history. It is 205 feet in diameter, erected in 1807 as a fort. Lafayette was received here in 1824 and Jenny Lind sang here in 1850. For thirty-five years it was an immigrant receiving station—almost 8,000,000 of them having passed through its doors.

The character of the exhibit necessarily varies somewhat with the seasons. About 350 different kinds of fresh-water and marine fish have been shown. The average exhibit covers about 200 different species.

Among the most peculiar varieties are—the sea-horse, said to be the only fish having a tail used for grasping purposes; the thread fish, having fin rays which often attain a length several times that of the fish itself; the Nassau grouper which can change its color eight times in as many minutes; the puffer which has the power to inflate itself with air and float and the sucking fish which is provided with a sucking disk on top of the head and attaches itself to the glass front or side of the tank, from which it can be loosed only with difficulty.

PLAYGROUND NEWS

A cardboard exhibit of articles made by the youngsters on the playgrounds is being exhibited in some of the windows of our stores in different parts of the city. Some of these articles are made from left over materials. Others are made from materials furnished, others are made from material the children bring themselves or buy.

The baseball schedule is now pretty well advanced. In another week it will be possible to publish the standing of the various teams in the different districts. Newton Upper Falls seems to be getting the lead in the south part of the city. West Newton is leading in the west, and Stearns Playground in the north.

Fistball is taking a greater hold of our young boys and girls than last year. On the Cabot Playground it became necessary to install a second court and it was found that several teams had to wait for their chance to play.

A girls' team, by the way, which won the last year's championship in fistball for the Cabot Playground and a team of boys from Upper Falls will go to Somerville next Tuesday afternoon to play an exhibition game and later show the youngsters of Somerville how to play this fascinating game. The jumping pits on all the playgrounds have lately been receiving considerable attention from the working force of the department, owing to the fact that the boys and girls have shown great interest in this jumping. The Pleasant Street and of the Newton Centre Playground has lately received considerable attention. This part of the playground can now be used for city purposes, having been turned to the city for this use by the Metropolitan Park Commissioner. It is not generally known that this playground has the only public archery court in the United States. Every pleasant afternoon a large number of ladies and gentlemen practice this sport.

The Band Concert scheduled for last Thursday on the Newton Highlands Playground was postponed to Friday and again had to be postponed for this Thursday. This makes three Thursday evenings concerts that were spoiled by rain.

During the Playground Institute held for the benefit of the playground directors this last Tuesday on the Newton Centre Playground, the following games were practiced and all directors took part in the practice: Schlag Ball was in charge of Mr. Leary.

Walking for speed in charge of Mr. Roberts.

Fistball in charge of Mr. Bond.

Baseball for girls in charge of Mr. Donahue.

The rest of the morning meeting was taken up with routine matters pertaining to the department.

The annual field day will be probably held during the week of Aug. 21st and will again be held on the Newton Centre Playground. Besides demonstrations of different games and playground activities there will be an annual champion meet of two classes of girls and four classes of boys. There will be a band concert and other features to make the day attractive to both youngsters and the parents.

Thursday of next week will be devoted to an exhibition of "Safety Posters" on all our playgrounds. These posters were furnished by the Massachusetts Safety Council. In addition to these posters there will be story telling for this day. Some of the stories are set forth so that the children can understand the dangers of the street traffic and how we can reduce the terrible number of accidents which are now so prominent all over the state.

TALL MEN

Whenever a tall man looms up above his fellows in a crowd, our eyes involuntarily dwell on him, and if he is very tall we wonder how the weather is up there! It may be warmer or colder—but it must be clearer in any case, and he is able to see a great deal more than ordinary people.

And so, I believe the tall man is needed in the extension of business and industry and public utilities and in politics and governments. We all admit the desirability of the broad man, who can reach out in any direction and grasp a multitude of interests; and if his understanding of, and sympathy for the needs of other people are as broad as his private interests he is a wonderful citizen for any country. And the little, busy workers of the hive are the bees that make the honey. But the tall man exemplifies the man of vision: the one who can look above and beyond his short-sighted fellows and see over the heads of the crowd.

The tall man in trade and industries is he who can foresee the future and its needs—not just merely the present conditions. And the tall man in public life is the statesman who sees not merely his own little corner of the country, and the needs of his petty constituency, but looks with a far-reaching vision over the whole country, and over all countries—and the world entire—and the whole race of mankind. We had one such recently, and we have scourged him and crucified him—but he will return again and will live in the hearts and the faith of his people long after petty politicians have had their day and gone their way to oblivion.

Let us have tall men to lead us out of the stagnant morass of our industrial condition. And tall men at the head of government, who can see over the heads of the clamorous populace, and direct us aright. Normalcy is a good word. But efficiency is a better thing! And in the future let us "look up, and not down"—and firmly resolve to have no more pygmies in politics! Of course the tall man is a target—so to speak! He is conspicuous. And human nature is such that if we look up too much we get a crick in the neck. But if we persevere perhaps we may overcome this tendency, and be the better for it.

And I am reminded of another drawback of the tall man: A story of a very tall Broadway policeman who helped a little old lady across the street. As he guided her over, she looked up at him admiringly and said: "It must be splendid, to be so big and tall!" and he, with some recent experience ranking in his mind—said, "Yes, lady—but it's h-l when you're buyin' pants!"

Proof Positive.

There recently entered the office of a railway claim agent an old dorky who presented a request for compensation for the alleged loss of a mule, which was said to have been killed by one of the trains. "You are sure," remarked the agent, after hearing the story, "that it was our Atlanta express that killed your mule? Why are you so positive on that point?" "Why, boss," said the negro, as if surprised at the question, "dat mule done hopped every other train on yo' road!"—Harper's Magazine.

Powerful Explosive.

When liquid air containing from 40 to 50 per cent of oxygen is mixed with powdered charcoal it forms an explosive which is said to be comparable in power to dynamite and can be exploded by means of a detonator, says the Washington Star. This explosive has been used in coal mines. The liquid air evaporates so rapidly that the explosive cannot be stored, but must be used within a few minutes after it is prepared.

Colloidal Chemistry.

Colloidal chemistry is the chemistry of systems consisting of extremely finely divided material, such as bubbles, drops, grains, filaments and films in a state of suspension in other material. The chemist calls this system a "heterogeneous system consisting of a dispersed phase in a dispersion medium." Colloidal chemistry therefore is a study of extremely finely divided suspensions.

THIS paper has a plan which we think will be helpful and also save expense to your organization. Postal cards cost one cent each, and in addition to the cost of printing it takes a great deal of your time to address these cards for mailing. Why not advertise your meetings in the newspaper like sample advertisement below? This advertisement you can insert in this paper for $1.00 for one issue. Oftentimes you cannot reach your members through the mail because the time is too short. With the newspaper you can reach them the same night. Everybody reads it and they would look for these advertisements.

We think this plan will save you money, and we are sure it will save you a great deal of labor. If the organizations in this city join this plan it will be a great success and it will relieve all the secretaries of a great deal of work. Won't you bring this matter before your association and have some action taken?

THE LINCOLN MEMORIAL

THOSE who have visited foreign lands say that no other similar structure compares favorably, in either size, beauty or location, with the great, simple and admirably-situated monument erected by the people of America, in the capital of the nation, as a fitting tribute to the memory of the kindness and the greatness of our Lincoln.

Near the White House and the Washington Monument, and between the Capitol building and the National cemetery, this memorial is destined to become one of the most-visited of all the public buildings of the world.

The building is 202 feet long, 132 feet wide and surrounded by a row of marble columns, several feet in diameter at the base and 44 feet high. In the center of the interior is a colossal statue of Lincoln, in a seated position. Including the base, it is 30 feet high. It weighs 175 tons. It took twenty marble cutters eighteen months to carve this statue.

In each of the side walls are set monumental bronze tablets—one of Lincoln's famous Gettysburg address, the other of his masterful second inaugural address, while between these and the statue is a row of 36 columns, representing the states which existed when Lincoln died; on the walls above are 48 memorial wreaths, supported by eagles, representative of the states of today. At either end is a massive painting—12 feet high and 60 feet long.

THE MONUMENT TO THE PILGRIMS

ATOP TOWN HILL in Provincetown, Massachusetts, looking out over the restless sea from the great arm which that state flings out into it, stands a great and impressive monument of extraordinary beauty and great dignity.

This monument, one of the tallest on this continent, commemorates the anchoring of the Pilgrims in the historic Mayflower in the year 1620, their adoption of the first charter of a democratic government in the history of the world, the birth of the first white child born in New England and the whole chain of happenings which preceded the settlement at Plymouth.

Built entirely of Maine granite, the construction supervised by the Engineering Department of the United States Army, this structure rests upon a sixty-foot-square foundation, is 28 feet square at the base, approximately 252 feet high and the site is about 100 feet above the tides. The architecture is of the Italian Renaissance order, the design having been copied from the tower of Torre del Mangia at Siena, Italy.

The site was provided by Provincetown; the cost of the monument was defrayed by a joint fund contributed by Congress, the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, the town of Provincetown and individuals in all parts of the country. Dedication exercises were held on August 5th, 1910, the President of the United States being in attendance.

This staunch and magnificent commemorative structure, standing in silent triumph, is typical of the reliance and love of freedom which characterized this little band in their battle with the elements and fate and of their descendants in all parts of the world.

THE NATURAL BRIDGES OF UTAH

FORTY-FIVE miles north of Bluff, in southwestern Utah, within a space of about five miles, are three natural bridges which are understood to be the largest of their kind in existence.

Named Sipapu (Gate of Heaven), Kachina (Guardian Spirit) and Owachomo (Rock Mound), these bridges were discovered in 1895. The three constitute a National monument, being so proclaimed by Presidential announcement in 1908.

The largest of the three has an extreme height of 222 feet and is 65 feet thick at the top of the arch, which is 28 feet wide. It has a span of 261 feet, the height of the span being 157 feet.

One has but to fix those figures in his mind to gain a fair idea of the immensity of these wonders which Nature fashioned from the lofty walls of White canyon.

Near the monument are some caves and ruins which are believed to have been the homes of a prehistoric race which inhabited this section.

These bridges are best reached by stage or team from the railroad station at Thompson, Utah, to Monticello, thence by pack-horse—a journey through a strange, deserted-looking, but interesting land.

WHERE THE WEST BEGINS

Being the story of the annual meeting of the National Editorial Association

"Out Where the West Begins" is the title of a well-known poem, and as it is appropriate for the part of the country selected this year for the annual convention and tour of the National Editorial Association, I shall pre-empt a part of that title for an account of our experiences the past month.

Our party left Boston on Saturday morning, July 8, and was augmented at Albany by a number of New York friends, whose presence on these outings has always added to the pleasure of us all.

We reached Chicago a little after noon on Sunday and after lunch greeted more old friends at the Hotel Morrison, the rendezvous for the Association, until our special train left for St. Paul, about 11 P. M.

Our little party spent the afternoon and evening with some good friends at Evanston, one of the residential suburbs of Chicago, and I was surprised as well as pleased to learn that Evanston and several more municipal corporations remain independent of Chicago and still administered their own local affairs. We noted with interest a school building, where every room was on the ground floor and had a separate door opening outside. We had a most enjoyable dinner that evening at the Westmoreland Country Club, which reminded me somewhat of the Brae Burn club house, and walked a little about the golf course. On our way down town that night I noticed that there were no glaring headlights, and indeed, many cars had no head lights at all, while some had only their parking lamps lighted. I was told that there was a fine of $200 for glaring headlights and that it was rigidly enforced.

There was a glad reunion that night at train time, for many of our party had been on similar trips in the past and were well acquainted with each other. A number of us who had travelled through the Canadian Northwest, three years ago, in "Car 4," had been again assigned to Car 4 on this special train, and it was a late hour before we settled down to sleep.

The distance from Chicago to Minneapolis is 442 miles, and the greater part of that distance was travelled as we slept, so that when we awoke, we were well up the valley of the Mississippi, travelling on the Wisconsin shore on the Burlington route. And I must add a small tribute to that road for the splendid service it gave our party. For it must not be forgotten that a railroad strike was in progress, and that our party alone had received over 200 cancellations of reservations, due entirely to fear of the strike. At one stop, we noted that it was the superintendent of the division, the road master, the yard master, and other railroad officials who, in overalls, were doing the work of inspecting our equipment in order that we might ride in safety over the "Q" road while groups of strikers were seen intently watching our progress.

One of the scenic features of the ride that morning was Lake Pepin, a widening of the river for 22 miles and an extreme width of nearly three miles, and is said to be the most picturesque portion of the entire Mississippi river valley.

We reached St. Paul about noon and were guests of the St. Paul Commercial club at an excellent luncheon at the Athletic Club, at which Governor Preuss and the Mayor were the principal speakers. Previous to the lunch our party visited the largest railroad building in the world, that occupied by the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific companies. It is a block long, a half a block wide, and 13 stories in height. The exhibition rooms were filled with hundreds of specimens of fruit, vegetables, fish in glass jars with many kinds of grain, and stuffed animals on the walls. Several pictures made of nothing but corn, wheat, straw, bits of grass and glue, and which look as if made with paint and brush, attracted deserved attention. After lunch we were driven about the city, around the state capitol, and through Summit avenue, a most beautiful street, lined with fine residences to Minnehaha Falls, one of the many fine parks of the adjoining city of Minneapolis. The last time I was in Minneapolis, there was no water running over the falls, but on this occasion, there was plenty of water and the falls are really beautiful, although they were later outdone by what Montana had to offer. Resuming our drive we were most pleasantly entertained on the lawn of the Minneapolis home of Mr. Will Wilke, one of our executive committee, Mrs. Wilke coming down from her country home, over 150 miles away, in order to act as our hostess. Mrs. Wilke's hospitality was greatly appreciated. We then drove around several of the charming lakes for which Minneapolis is noted and augmented to a party of about 200 persons left on the Northern Pacific road that evening for Montana, the objective of our trip.

HOW MASSACHUSETTS IS GOVERNED

The first article in a series on state departments written by Representative J. C. Brimblecom

The interest with which a series of articles on the subject of "How Newton is Governed," was received a few years ago, has prompted a similar series of letters on the government of the state.

While the author has a more intimate knowledge of city affairs through a service of over 36 years at City Hall, he brings to the present subject the experience of three years as one of the Representatives to the General Court from Newton with some ten years of previous acquaintance with legislative matters.

For the first article in this series we shall take the work of the legislative branch of the state government, officially known as the Great and General Court.

Many persons, through a misunderstanding of conditions, often criticize the legislature of Massachusetts for the length of its sessions. The legislatures of most states have sessions either limited by the constitution, or so arranged that the salary ceases after a certain number of days or weeks. Such limitations operate to exclude many matters of legislation or cause a hurried and superficial consideration.

Massachusetts, on the other hand has always been proud of the fact that every petition for legislation is given a public hearing by a committee of the General Court, and the report of that committee is acted upon by both branches, thus upholding the inalienable right of petition established by the constitution. It is this procedure which is responsible for the length of the sessions in this state.

The Massachusetts legislature is composed of two branches, a Senate of 40 members and a House of 240 members. The senators are chosen for terms of two years each by the people of each senatorial district—districts which are established by the legislature every ten years, usually at the first session after the state census, taken in years ending with the figure 5. Members of the House are also chosen by districts for two years, these districts being determined by the county commissioners of each county, after the legislature has fixed the number apportioned for each county.

Middlesex, for instance, has 48 members, and the district are determined by the county commissioners after a public hearing. Districts may be represented by one, two, or three representatives, as the commissioners determine. Newton, has three representatives, Waltham, two, Brookline, two, Watertown, one, etc.

Senators and representatives are elected biennially with the other state officers and serve for two years from the first Wednesday of January following their election. On that day, each branch assembles in its chamber at the State House, and the Senate elects a President, a clerk, a chaplain and a sergeant-at-arms. At the same time, the House elects a Speaker, a clerk and a chaplain, and, with the Senate, jointly, a sergeant-at-arms. It is the usual custom for the members of each political party to hold a caucus, before assembling, and to nominate candidates for these offices. Until the President and Speaker are elected the oldest member in point of service presides in the Senate and in the House.

The real work of the legislature is done in committees composed of senators and representatives and the first duty of the President and Speaker is to appoint these committees. There are some 40 committees provided by the rules of both branches, the first named senator being the chairman of the committee and the first named House member, being designated as the House chairman and presides in the absence of the Senate chairman. With so many committees, about every senator has a chairmanship, and while he may be a member of three or four committees, he usually devotes his time to the committee of which he is chairman. After the committees have been appointed they get together and select one of their number, usually, a new member to be the clerk. The committee also designates a regular day for its meetings and then awaits the business which is referred to it by both branches. There is always a flood of petitions and the rules require all new business to be in by the second Saturday of January, although this rule can be, and frequently is waived, for matters which come in late. Petitions relating to the same subject are usually heard by the committee at the same time and are generally advertised in one or more newspapers. The advertising of these hearings is more or less of a farce and should be done effectively or abolished altogether.

After the hearing or hearings, if the public interest is sufficient to have more than one day's consideration, the committee determines its action and gives the matter into the hands of one of its members to report either to the Senate or House. Fully 90 per cent of the reports are either "leave to withdraw" or "next annual session", the latter being a more polite method of refusing to grant the petition. If the committee reports adversely, the matter goes on the calendar of one branch, over the name of the committee member in charge of the report. If favorable, the report takes the form of a bill and also goes on the calendar over the name of the member in charge.

The sessions of each branch are always opened with prayer by the chaplain,—after which some time is taken in reading petitions and bills into the record for reference and other miscellaneous business. It is then customary to take up the printed calendar for that session, known as the "Orders of the Day". The presiding officer reads each item on the calendar by number and title and immediate action is taken, unless some member calls "pass". Each item in the calendar is thus taken up and when the list is concluded, the first item passed is taken up for further consideration. Members interested, then have an opportunity to urge the House or Senate to either accept or negative the recommendation of the committee, the usual form being in case of an adverse report, to move the substitution of the bill for the adverse report. In most matters the action of the committee is usually sustained, although, I have frequently seen the House through some curious kind of psychology turn down report after report of committees and at the next session, vote solidly to sustain the reports of the same committee. A vote is usually taken by aye and nay, the presiding officer announcing the result as he interprets it. If dissatisfied, any member may doubt the vote, in which case a standing vote is taken, with monitors in

HOW YOU CAN KEEP COOL

Dr. William H. Evans, former Health commissioner of Chicago, tells one of the secrets of keeping cool, as published in the "How to Keep Well" column of The Chicago Tribune of July 17, as follows:

"Drink no alcoholic beverages of any sort. In the first place, drinking alcoholic beverages sends an excessive amount of blood to the skin. The skin is about the only tissue in the body that can feel heat. The blood is hot. Therefore, drinking alcoholic beverages makes you feel hotter than you are."

"Comparing the summer of 1921 with that of 1916, we find that the former was much the hotter. On the other hand, the deaths from heat in Chicago during 1921 were 26 as compared with 535 in 1916."

"Most cases of sunstroke were cases of beerstroke, as this column has contended for years."

To me the prohibition act is essentially American in its purpose. Its aim is to develop the highest type of American character and manhood. I think it must be admitted that Washington was right when he said that our free institutions rest, in the last analysis, upon American character.

The law is essentially American, not only in its purpose but in its outlook. There is a puzzle that is sometimes given to the student of ethics, "When is good bad?" There is one answer—"Good can only be bad when it keeps us from our best."

Prohibition has not divided the nation against itself. It has rather ranged the great forces of our government squarely on one side of a great question and I am pleased to say that the real forces of Americanism are lined up on the right side of the question of law enforcement.

ROY A. HAYNES,

Federal Prohibition Commissioner.

MANY STRONG ORGANIZATIONS WORKING TO NULLIFY NATIONAL CONSTITUTIONAL PROHIBITION

Between thirty and forty organizations in the United States are said to be actively at work to overthrow and nullify the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead Act. At the head of the list is the National Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, which claims a membership of nearly half a million, and maintains headquarters at Washington, D. C.

It makes no secret of its purpose, which is to elect next November a Congress that can be depended upon to vote for a modification of the Volstead Act to permit a return of "light wines and beer."

One part of their program, according to The Christian Science Monitor, which is publishing an illuminating series of articles on the activities of these organizations, is to keep constantly before the public the argument that a beverage with no higher alcoholic content than 2.75 per cent is innocuous, that it will be a great revenue producer and at the same time will reduce the illicit traffic. Authors, publishers, professional men and politicians have been enlisted in that part of the campaign. As a sample of that form of propaganda, Peter G. Boyle, a publisher at 267 West 17th St., New York City, sends out a letter to the clubs, organizations and individuals as follows:

"Appeal for Independence
"Inclosed please find an anti-prohibition booklet, which needs no explanation. Shall we as American citizens allow a narrow-minded fanatical and dictatorial class to take from us that which we prize above all else as a nation—personal liberty and freedom of thought and action in all that was guaranteed us under the Constitution? If our rights can be torn from us as easily as they have been by the questionable eighteenth amendment where will such insanity end? If we do not resent this class injustice with our votes for those who will rectify it, we shall, no doubt, be treated to prohibition of tea, tobacco, coffee, candy, dancing, music, movies, theatres, auto-riding and other so-called reform amendments ad nauseam."

"There are vast numbers of Americans laboring under the delusion that the Eighteenth Amendment can never be repealed. Let all such disabuse their minds of that idea. After the Eighteenth Amendment had been passed by seven short of the number required by Article 5 of the Constitution and had been ratified by more than three-fourths of the state legislatures, it was discovered that it did not specify what constituted intoxicating beverages, nor did it provide any penalty whatsoever for disobedience to this amendment."

"Section 2 provided that Congress and state legislatures should have concurrent power to enforce this Amendment by appropriate legislation. If Congress had not passed the Volstead Act nor any separate act passed its own enforcement act, the eighteenth amendment would have been a dead letter, for no matter how often the Amendment was violated the violator could not have been punished."

"Therefore the Volstead Act is the light wines and beer. When the benefits of the amendment to that act have been demonstrated its full repeal will be in order. Not, in all probability, would it ever again be possible to enact a similar unjust law."

"When this point has been reached the Eighteenth Amendment will be dead and nothing will be remain but to repeal it, and remove the corpse. We respectfully submit the inclosed booklet to your organization for its approval and action. The more the subject is agitated the sooner we shall have relief from an intolerable and un-American situation."

This book is entitled "Prohibition Un-American. Un-Christian and Un-Economical," by Frederic Lynn Cobb. It is expected to sell the book in large numbers for use in political campaigns.

THE SANITY LEAGUE OF AMERICA SEEKS TO INCREASE THE NUMBER OF VIOLATORS OF THE NATIONAL PROHIBITION LAW and thus put it out of commission, in the personal opinion of G. W. Sommer, a local attorney, according to the Spokane (Wash.) Chronicle. "The League is designed to provide jobs for a bunch of organizers who are after special donations in addition to the dollar membership dues," adds Mr. Sommer.

BLAISDELL-ROBERTS

A pretty home wedding occurred Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur A. Roberts, 1204 Chestnut street, Newton Upper Falls, when their daughter Bertha Adelaide became the bride of Mr. Roland Whipple Blaisdell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Blaisdell. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Frederick Palladino of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Newton Upper Falls.

Miss Mabel E. Roberts, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid and the best man was Mr. Lawrence Blaisdell, the bridegroom's brother. The ushers were Mr. Clifton Temperly of Newton, an intimate friend of the bride and groom, and Arthur C. Roberts, brother of the bride.

The bride was attired in white georgette crepe with an overdress of lace and carried a bouquet of white roses. Her veil was held in place with orange blossoms. The bridesmaid wore primrose organdie. Her bouquet was composed of pale pink and yellow roses.

After the ceremony a reception was held. Owing to a recent death in the bride's family, only relatives and a few close friends were present.

The bride was born in Revere, but has resided in Newton since she was five years old. She is a graduate of the Newton Classical High School, class of 1917, and of Framingham Normal, class of 1919. The groom was born in Hamilton. He is a graduate of the Winchester High School. After the honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Blaisdell will reside at Markettree road, Needham, where they will be at home to their friends after Oct. 1st.

WILBUR THEATRE—Although the Boston theatrical season is still early, at least one big musical comedy success has already been registered in the form of "Love and Kisses" which opened at the Wilbur Theatre last Monday and which immediately captivated all who listened to its bright comedy and heard its melodious tunes. "Love and Kisses" is a delightful departure from the deluge of jazz and revues with which the Boston stage has been sufficed the past two seasons. It marks a return to the more pretentious style of musical comedy, inasmuch as there is a beautiful story, the plot of which is kept alive throughout the performance, and the musical numbers are all part of the story.

EDITORIAL

The filing of over 21,000 names to place on the ballot the matter of acceptance or rejection of the act passed by the Legislature of this year, requiring district attorneys to be members of the bar, is a striking illustration of the fallacy of the Initiative and referendum amendment to the constitution. There should be no question about the acceptance of this act by the people and it should be by such a large margin as to show the Pelletier advocates that Massachusetts demands the highest character for its elected officials.

The editor of the Graphic has just returned from a convention of newspaper men of the country and was honored at that convention with an election as president of the National Editorial Association, one of the oldest organizations of its kind in the country. This honor is greatly appreciated, not only as a personal compliment, but as a tribute to the Graphic as a newspaper.

We begin this week a series of articles on "How Massachusetts is Governed" on the same general lines as a series run several years ago on the subject of "How Newton is Governed." We expect to take up the various departments of activities in the state and show what the Commonwealth is doing along many lines of work.

With the closing of the lists for candidates for nomination at the coming primary on Sept. 12th, the voters can begin to size up the situation and to form their own conclusions. Newton has many candidates for various offices and there should be a large vote.

RED CROSS LIFE SAVING

The local Y. M. C. A. swimming pool is a popular place these hot summer days and nights. A refreshing shower followed by a cool swim in the clean tank after a day's grind in the heat gives one a fresh outlook on life.

Not only is the pool used for pleasure and refreshment, but the more serious and important phase of water sports is also taken up in the form of life-saving. This course of instruction covers the Red Cross life-saving test including all the approved methods of towing, breaking holds, the Schaefer method of resuscitation etc. During the spring and summer months nearly a hundred men and boys have successfully passed this test. Learn to swim for two is the slogan of the day and the local Y is doing its part to make this a reality. Other groups will be put through the life-saving test shortly.

Private instruction is also a feature of the aquatic work. The clean comfortable water is ideal for teaching purposes and hundreds are taught annually by expert instructors.

Baseball

The Y team defeated the Lafayette A. C. of Cambridge last Saturday by the wide margin of 12 to 1. The hard-hitting by the local team featured August 12th the rubber game with the strong Cadillac team will be played on the Y. M. C. A. field at 3.30. Each team has won a close game and both are out to win the final. Curran and Concepcion will be the battery for Newton.

NEWTON Y. M. C. A. NOTES

The usual group of boys from Boston were entertained last Wednesday at the Association building. Mrs. A. C. Bang and Mrs. Walter T. Hennigan were in charge of the luncheon served at 12.30.

Secretary H. W. Bascom has issued a midsummer report to the trustees and directors and some of the outstanding facts are as follows: The dormitory rooms are all taken and there is a waiting list. If there was another story added to the building it could be easily filled with young men who desire rooms. The Frank A. Day Camp although enlarged so as to accommodate eighty boys at one time has not been able to accommodate all those who applied.

The bible class, Debating Club, educational trips, games, and a daily swim keeps up the interest among the boys who are spending their summer in Newton. Mr. Anson T. Leary, the Community Secretary, is acting as assistant playground director during July and August. The present membership includes 333 boys and 725 men. The woodwork on the outside of the building has already been painted, and the rooms and corridors are being painted and brightened up inside. The finance committee are making plans for the 3rd annual financial canvass during October 1922.

MR. JEWETT RETIRES

Henry L. Jewett, vice president and secretary of the International Trust Co., and for 43 years in its service, although enjoying excellent health, has decided to retire from active business. His resignation to the Board of Directors was regrettably accepted.

Mr. Jewett was one of the most popular and widely known banking men in Boston, has been associated with the International Trust Company since its inception. In fact, he has the distinction of being the first depositor in the International Trust and ever since that time he has been an active factor in its development. For many years Mr. Jewett made his home in Auburndale.

WHERE THE WEST BEGINS

form a most interesting and suggestive panorama. The peculiar landscape, enlivened by brilliant colors of the exposed strata creates a lasting impression.

Our first stop was at Medora, N. D., noted for the fact that Theodore Roosevelt owned a ranch here in his younger days. The stop was made to have our Association take part in the beginning of a monument to Roosevelt, the base of which had already been laid before we arrived. We were met by a picturesque lot of cowboys and escorted to the monument, where there were speeches by several persons, including Governor Nestos and the writer. I told them that Newton had some claim on Roosevelt admirers for he married his first wife in this city and it was largely her death that sent him to Medora. After the celebration of the exercises could be called that, we walked to the fair grounds, and were given our first exhibition of riding bucking horses, steers, branding and roping. It was all new to most of us and the time passed altogether too quickly, and we were recalled to the train by the whistle of the locomotive.

As we passed over the line between North Dakota and Montana, I was sought out by the Montana committee and presented with a large wooden Yale lock key, emblematic of what Montana was to offer us in the way of entertainment.

We stopped a few moments at Glendive, where we bade adieu to Governor Nestos and were greeted with flowers and ice cream cones by a bevy of good-looking young ladies and the active officers of a local chamber of commerce. Incidentally, all the ladies of the party were presented with a moss agate, quantities of which are found in the bed of the adjoining river.

Our first real stop in Montana was at Miles City, which is named after General Nelson A. Miles of this state. Here we were given a real imitation of a Jesse James hold up, our train being stopped some two miles from the city by a gang of cow boys, wearing handkerchief masks on their faces.

They worked from both ends of the train, but the real feature was the boys who were assigned to the rear of the train, for their first victim was one of the porters of the observation car, and he failed to see the joke of the affair and will long remember the feeling of having a big six shoved against his ribs.

This band of "robbers" was lead by he'll Roaring Jones, whose cards say "Express Car Specialist."

This feature was much enjoyed by the editors, some of whom are free now to admit they hid their small cash balances and while so doing wondered who would have so little forethought as to hold up a trainload of editors.

Upon the arrival of the special train at the Northern Pacific depot we were greeted by the local band and a delegation of Cheyenne Indians dressed in their full regalia, and the local citizens committee. The greetings were cordial and happy and given in true western style.

Following the experience of being "held up" we were prepared for almost anything.

The old stage coach formerly run between Miles City and Deadwood was resurrected, an old Indian scout in regulation costume and rifle rode on the outside and two of our party were "arrested" and rode inside, leading the long line of automobiles to the Fair grounds. We passed a large number of corrals, for Miles City was a most important place during the war for furnishings horses and mules for the Allies.

At the Fair grounds we were entertained with a Wild West Show, consisting of Cossack and standing Roman races, saddle and bare back bucking—these were the spectacular events and an excellent exhibition of wild west riding.

Preceding the entertainment, there were the inevitable speeches and as acting head of the party I was presented with a huge wooden key to the city.

A "Chuck Wagon Feed" was enjoyed and the beans and coffee went well after the busy program of entertainment.

After the ceremonies at the Fair grounds the cars were loaded and a drive of several miles was made, passing through the old Fort Keough, which during the recent war was a busy remount station. While it is still maintained by the government as a fort, it was during the war of much importance as foreign buyers as well as horse and mule buyers for our government was located here.

The auto trip terminated at the auto camping ground where the Indians gave a war dance and other entertainment.

These Indians of the Cheyenne tribe had been allowed to come from their reservation to Miles City for a "roundup" two days before our visit and had been persuaded to stay over until we arrived. They were in full costume and after the fire had been lighted that night gave several of their ceremonial dances to the music (?) of the tom toms. To my great surprise, I was called out and with the wife of our executive secretary, was formally adopted as a member of the tribe, and given the name of "Sitting Bull." I had rather a queer sensation while standing in a circle of dancing Indians but enjoyed such a unique experience.

Miles City is the center of a vast farming and stock-raising country. The trade territory extends one hundred miles and more in both directions to the north and the south. Jordan, "one hundred miles from Miles," the capital of Garfield county, and Broadus, the famous capital of Powder River country, lie two hundred miles apart.

In that territory, big as it is, there is every evidence of the agricultural activity which has assisted materially in putting the state of Montana "on the map," using a common expression. Not to be overlooked are the vast beds of lignite which are resting under an overburden of from ten to twenty-five feet, and to be found in the creek bottoms in millions of tons. Coal strikes may prove to be disastrous to the industries of other sections of the country, but here in southeastern Montana there is enough lignite, or soft coal, to last for several generations, and the extent of the distribution which might be made possible would easily include the whole territory of the United States.

Fort Keogh, first established as an outpost against the invasion of Indians upon incoming settlers less than half a century ago, has grown to be the greatest primary army horse market in the country. Horses, famous in the annals of the cavalry branch of the American army have been trained here.

The city has a tax rate of 55 mills per $100 based on a 30% valuation. Its water rates are higher than Newton being $2 per month for a 5-room house. I found that there is a division between the city and the county on matters of education, the city bearing the expense of the grade schools while the county builds and maintains the high schools. Later I found this was the custom throughout the state. Montana schools are excellent and the federal government ranks Montana first in education in the whole country.

Taken by and large, our first day in Montana was one long to be remembered.

J. C. BRIMBLECOM.

PLAYGROUND NEWS

A team of boys from the Upper Falls Playground and a girls team from the Cabot playground went to Somerville on Tuesday afternoon in three automobiles to give a demonstration of fistball. They were received on Broadway Park, Somerville, by the Supervisor of playgrounds, Somerville, Mr. Steven Mahoney, some of the Somerville Directors, and a few hundred children. Our teams played a set of three games and the boys nosed out a win by a few points, series ending 2 to 1 in favor of the Upper Falls boys. During the third game, both teams really warmed to the fray and gave a splendid exhibition of this beautiful game. The Somerville Superintendent will bring over in teams made up of the different playgrounds some time next week, when our youngsters will teach the Somerville boys and girls this game on one of our home playgrounds. The Somerville children were delighted with the game and expressed their eagerness to know more about it.

A splendid picnic was conducted by the directors, Miss Cameron, Miss Swartz and Miss Temperly of the Eden Avenue Playground last Tuesday afternoon. A great deal of the picnic success is due the interest of a number of mothers of this district who helped making lemonade, cookies and cakes. There were about 300 youngsters present and the afternoon was enjoyed by all. They played a number of games between the Eden Avenue and the West Newton Playground teams. They had some athletic events, prizes consisting of lollypops. The expenses were met by the children themselves, each bringing two cents to the picnic. They enjoyed it so much that they intend to repeat it next week, when the Eden Avenue children will return the compliment to West Newton Common. Mr. Donahue, the local supervisor, greatly assisted in the picnic.

Although the Band Concert and Dance planned for Newton Highlands some time ago finally came off last Thursday, and although the evening was misty and occasionally rain fell, they were present in the neighborhood of two thousand people. The dancing platform was crowded through out the evening.

A number of bundles of material useful for children's constructive play was received at the playground office during the past week. Among them was a bundle of beautiful collection of silks, etc. from a former resident of Newton, now living in Brookline, who in her letter indicates that she still takes a great interest in Newton activities.

The city of Newton, Playground Field Day is scheduled to take place August 23rd on the Newton Centre Playground. We hope that the parents will reserve this day and will join the children in this occasion.

For some time there has been a rumor occurring on the Upper Falls Playground, that the land adjoining the playground was to be used by a contractor for the erection of a number of houses. Local residents interested in the welfare of the community particularly the playground, have taken steps, we are told, to prevent this. They feel that a strip of 100 feet is greatly needed to round out this playground.

The next playground directors institute will be held Tuesday morning August 22nd. Among other things the opportunity will be used to announce the final plans for the Annual Field Day.

In the games scheduled, the following playgrounds stand at the head of their league.

POLICE NOTES

Patrolman William Dowling shortly after 1 o'clock Wednesday morning found a large touring car with the bearings burned out and the water in the radiator boiling over on Centre street near Willow street, Newton Centre. The car had evidently been abandoned but shortly before, judging by its condition. In the automobile were 13 gallons of alcohol in tins and 12 quarts of a well-known brand of whiskey, hidden under the robes on the rear seat. Much mystery surrounds the machine as it is registered in the name of James J. Cassidy of Attleboro. Mr. Cassidy's car is of one make while the abandoned auto is of another. It is believed by the police that the occupants were in such a hurry that the bearings burned out, and that the registration plates had been changed.

In the District Court Monday morning, Daniel J. Saunders of 30 Crescent street, West Newton, was fined $100 on a charge of operating an automobile while he was under the influence of liquor. Saunders was arrested shortly before 8 o'clock that morning by Patrolman Foley.

CORRESPONDENCE

To the Editor of the Newton Graphic:

The writer, last week, in trying to buy some nut coal, was told by two of our retail coal dealers, that they would only furnish it providing I would take half of my order in Pea Coal, at $15 per ton, or Coke at the same price. Is not this the worst kind of profiteering? And it is a case that should receive the attention of the "Necessaries of Life Commission."

It would appear that the coal dealers have a quantity of Pea Coal on hand that is unsaleable, and they are taking advantage of the coal situation to dispose of it, and at an unheard of price, which is practically double what it has been selling for. I have been told that all the Newton coal men are doing the same.

What are we coming to, if the so-called reputable dealers are adopting such tactics?

FRED P. BARNES.

HOW MASSACHUSETTS IS GOVERNED

each of the four divisions in which the seats of the House are divided, making the count and reporting to the Speaker when called upon. If further dissatisfied, any member may further doubt the vote, and ask for a call of the yeas and nays, and which must be supported by at least 30 members of the House. If this number ask for the roll call, a gong is sounded in the lobby, to call in members who are not on the floor of the House and the Clerk proceeds to call the names of each member in a process which takes from 15 to 20 minutes.

Similar methods are pursued in the Senate, except that the President makes note of the standing votes and it requires one-fifth of the senators present to make a roll call.

Where bills are to be prepared, many details have to be worked out, and on important matters this is usually left to a sub-committee of three members who draft the bill and submit it to the full committee for action. On some measures the committee may not meet for action but each man is seen and his vote recorded as for or against the measure. On receipt of a favorable committee report with a bill, the latter is given its first reading, as a matter of routine, and then is listed on the calendar for a second reading. If it takes a second reading, it is again listed on the calendar of the following day for a third reading. After passing this point it goes to a committee on third reading and is scrutinized by the counsel of either the House or Senate, as the case may be, for errors in grammar, punctuation and, for what is most important, as to whether it is properly drafted and does not conflict with existing law, or properly amends the existing law. Both the Senate and House counsel are able men and command a high salary. In presenting bills for action, the petitioner ought to consult these gentlemen in the preparation of his bill and thus save valuable time when final action is reached. On report of the committee on bills in third reading (and any action recommended by that committee is usually accepted by the House or Senate, the bill is passed to be engrossed and sent to the other branch for an action on similar lines as that above. Having been passed to be engrossed by both branches the bill goes to the office of the secretary of the Commonwealth where it is typed on special typewriters in an upright script type, on parchment. An interesting thing in connection with the engrossment is the fact that the law requires a continuous line of writing with no opportunity for interlineations. It is then read by the committee on engrossed bills of the House, and on its report, the House passes the bill to be enacted, or if it wishes to kill the matter, there is opportunity at that time to strike out the enacting clause. This action is rarely taken, however, the opponents of a measure having had three previous opportunities to kill the bill and usually quit at this stage. Passed to be enacted, it is signed by the Speaker and goes to the Senate where it is examined by the Senate committee on engrossed bills (or is supposed to be so examined, altho as a matter of fact, the Senate committee usually relies on what the House committee has done, and reports accordingly) and on its enactment is signed by the President of the Senate and goes to the Governor for approval or disapproval. The Governor has ten days in which to take action. If he approves the bill by adding his name to it, the bill is returned to the office of the Secretary where it is given its number and becomes chapter so and so of the Acts of that year. If the Governor disapproves of the bill, he may do one of two things,—he may allow the bill to become a law without his signature by refusing to take any action during the ten days it is before him, or he may return it with his reasons for disapproval in writing, to the branch of the legislature in which it originated.

On receipt of such a veto message, the House or Senate proceeds to vote again on the measure by roll call and if two thirds of each branch vote in favor of the bill it becomes law notwithstanding the veto.

The seats of the members of the House are supposed to be assigned by lot, on the first day of the session, but it has become the custom to assign certain seats near the Speaker's desk to members who are deaf, or old or have some physical disability and it is surprising how many of these can be found in a body of 240 men. The writer had the unique experience of drawing by lot the same seat on the two occasions he has participated in the seat lottery. Members are assigned a locker with the same number as their seat, the locker being located in the adjoining lobby. In the lobby are telephone booths, and out of it opens a spacious reading room, while beyond that is a writing room and the post office.

The House chamber is a beautiful room, paneled in white mahogany, delicately carved, with stained glass in the dome. The seats are arranged in a series of semi circles, facing the Speaker's desk, and divided by three wide aisles into four divisions. The great doors at the end of the centre aisle, face the Speaker and are only used on formal occasions, the two side doors serving for ordinary use. There is a reporters' gallery at the right of the Speaker and the corresponding gallery at his left is for his own personal use. The main gallery is at the back, facing the Speaker and is open to the public at all times, a portion being reserved for ladies. At the front of this gallery hangs the sacred codfish, an honored relic of Colonial days.

Persons desirous of meeting a Representative, must sign a card at the door, and the messenger then endeavors to locate him, either in his seat or in the lobby, which is a favorite loafing place for many members. There are also a few chairs at the sides of the chamber to which the public are admitted on request of members.

The Senate meets in what was the old House of Representatives, the forty seats being arranged in almost a complete circle with the President's desk making the circle complete. Seat 13 is not used. The press gallery is over the President's desk, with a small gallery on each side, one for men, the other for women. There are a few seats on the floor of the Senate outside the rail, which can also be used by the public. Here, as in the House, visitors must sign a card if they wish to see any individual senator. The Senate has a beautiful reading room across the corridor from the entrance to the Senate chamber and their locker room opens out of the reading room.

Members of the House and Senate have files of all House and Senate bills, together with the daily calendars, and the daily journals of both branches, and towards the close of the session when these papers number well over 2000, the desks are far from tidy.

Members of both House and Senate receive a salary of $1500 and mileage at the rate of $3 per session for each unit of 5 miles from the State House. The mileage is paid at the beginning of the session, and each member receives $100 semi monthly until the close of the session when the remainder is paid in one check.

Nearly the entire fourth floor of the State House is taken up with rooms for committee meetings and the Gardner auditorium in the East Wing is used for hearings where there is more than the usual public interest.

There is some difference of opinion as to which committee is of the greatest importance. Lawyers naturally say that the Judiciary is of first importance and out of the traditions of the past, the House chairman of that committee is said to be the titular leader of the House, altho as a matter of fact the first named member of the committee on rules, after the Speaker (who always heads that committee) is the real floor leader. Others claim that the vastly important committee on Ways and Means stands in first place, and after witnessing the work of that committee in handling annual budgets of forty millions of dollars, I am inclined to agree that this committee is in the front rank. Newton and Greater Boston have a deep interest in the work of the committee on Metropolitan Affairs which takes jurisdiction on the many details in the government of the metropolitan area. The committees on Banks and Banking, on Insurance, on Mercantile Affairs, Street Railways, as well as many others also have important work to do.

While it is the fashion of the press to sneer and joke about the impotence of the Legislature, ridicule its work, and in many cases actually libel its members, I can bear testimony to the high character of the members of both House and Senate, both of which will stand favorable comparisons with bodies of men of equal number anywhere. It is true that with 280 men drawn from all classes of people, it is inevitable that there will be some of them who cannot measure up to the standards of so called "polite society" but who, nevertheless, fill a most important part in working for the public good. In a representative body like the Massachusetts legislature, there should be room for all kinds and conditions of men (and women) in order that our laws may meet with that support of the public which is absolutely necessary for good government.

J. C. Brimblecom.

APATHY AMONG THE VOTERS

We quote from an address delivered in Athol by Hon. Joseph E. Warner of Taunton, former Speaker of the House of Representatives, who is a candidate for the Republican nomination for Lieutenant governor: "Indifference of the electorate is the greatest menace confronting the national and state governments. Attendance at the party primary is crucial in the determination of candidates; non-attendance at the primary is a vital weakness of the American citizen and in turn a source of weakness to the very machinery which has been fabricated to legislate for the public welfare." In a paragraph Mr. Warner has placed his finger on a deplorable weakness that has for years existed in the Brookline electorate, that of non-attendance at the state primary.

From a party standpoint the primary is very vital, for at the primary and there only, has the party the opportunity of choosing the best candidate. If voters neglect the primary, the best candidate is often also neglected and the party then has to go to the election with the party nominee, who, because of the lack of interest the voters in general display toward the primary, may be the least fitted for the public office which he seeks. Along with the habitual disinterest in state primaries, is that curious disinclination of many voters to cast a ballot in a primary on the ground that they must declare party preference. They apparently have forgotten that under the system which existed prior to the direct primary law, they had to declare themselves then, for a Republican could not legally vote in a Democratic caucus, nor vice versa. Under the present system the caucuses of the various parties are combined, the difference being that a man must ask an election teller for the party ballot he desires, and is then officially noted as a member of the party whose ballot he asked for. But far more negligent than those who have qualms about declaring themselves, are those who simply don't regard the state primary at all, who ignore it altogether, regardless of the fact that the primary, as Mr. Warner points out, is crucial in the determination of candidates. We shall have a state primary next month, the first in two years under the biennial election system. It is the duty of all voters to learn who the candidates for nomination are, what their qualifications are, to weigh these questions carefully, to then vote accordingly in the primary with the same regard for civic duty and the same enthusiasm a voter always displays when he votes in a Presidential election. There are, by the way, a very considerable number of Newton voters who only get out to the polls when a President is to be elected.

Y. W. C. A.

A trip to Lynn beach is being planned for Saturday, Aug. 12, beginning with a swim and ending with a picnic supper on the beach. The girls will leave the Y. W. C. A. at 12 o'clock Saturday. Anyone wishing any further information call at the Y. W. C. A.

Saturday, Aug. 5, several Y. W. C. A. girls went swimming at Lake Waban. There seems to be great enthusiasm for swimming and several girls have learned how to swim. It is hoped that as many girls as possible will take advantage of the outings.

The Y. W. C. A. is open every day except Saturday from 11 A. M. until 7.30 P. M. It is hoped that the people of Newton will avail themselves of the privilege of using the rooms for both reading and rest. There is also a sewing machine which may be used between two and four o'clock every day except Saturday. Saturdays between 10 and 12.

WHERE THE WEST BEGINS

Being the story of the annual meeting of the National Editorial Association

The next morning we were awakened by the sounds of music and looked out on a railroad station platform where a band of Elks dressed in white with purple trimmings, were giving us a pleasant, although early welcome to the city of Billings.

We found Billings a most attractive city, and I want to say right here that, with the exceptions of Helena and Butte, we found all the cities in Montana were strictly modern, with splendid buildings and stores. The streets are all laid out with a wide margin of lawn between the curb and the sidewalk, and usually this lawn is kept in order by the city. The streets are well paved and of more than the average width of Eastern cities.

The Commercial Club of Billings has very good quarters and made us most welcome. After breakfast, we were driven about the city a little and then taken on what is called the "rim drive." Billings is on a flat plain almost surrounded by high and very steep bluffs. The "Rim Drive" is along the edge of these bluffs and one has a splendid view of the well-groomed city, the irrigated million acres, and at a distance of seventy-five or one hundred miles a glimpse of the snow-capped Bear-tooth range. A new experience to most of us was finding a rattlesnake in one of the clumps of grass near the edge. The noise of the rattle was not as loud as I had anticipated, but we all of us kept a safe distance away from Mr. Snake. This reminds me that at Miles City the day before, one of the cowboys wore a necklace said to be made of 60 or more rattles. Another unique sight of the Rim Drive was the graveyard of men who had "died with their boots on" a grim reminder of the earlier days of the city. We had lunch at the Airdome, served in cafeteria fashion, and afterwards drove about the city and out into the surrounding country. The farming lands are all irrigated, the water coming through a tunnel in the bluffs we visited that morning. In the evening the Commercial Club staged a very good entertainment for a stag party, while the ladies were guests at a local theatre. We shall always remember Billings, for its intense sunshine. I had fondly imagined that Montana, occupying a high plateau, of 3500 to 6000 feet above the sea, would be fairly comfortable in temperature, but it was the hottest place I ever visited. The thermometer must have been over 100 most of the day, although it was fairly cool in the shade and most comfortable when the sun went down.

Billings has a steam hot water plant which supplies heat to the houses and stores of the city, sells electricity for 6 cents for lighting purposes and natural gas for domestic uses for 50 cents a 1000 cubic feet.

The city has a public swimming pool, tennis courts, parks, an auditorium of 5,000 capacity, a large coliseum, a water system, excellent hotels, in fact the accompaniments of a modern city.

The retail stores of the city are a credit to the men who are conducting them and warrant the unstinted praise of those from eastern cities who marvel at the class of these establishments and the up-to-date methods in vogue in their management.

The educational advantages are up-to-date and besides good public schools there is a parochial school and a polytechnic institute working along higher educational lines. It is the commercial, manufacturing and financial center of a region two hundred miles in diameter.

HOW MASSACHUSETTS IS GOVERNED

The 2nd article in a series on state departments written by Representative J. C. Brimblecom

The office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, as it is best known, although the recent amendments to the Constitution have changed that title to that of state secretary, is one of the oldest in the history of the State, having been established in 1780. Its most important functions are the keeping of public records, the commissioning of all public officials, the printing of public documents, the charge of state primaries and elections, vital statistics, records of corporations, and the superintendence of the state census.

The state secretary is elected by the voters of the entire state and is one of the officers on what is called the "state ticket". If a vacancy occurs while the legislature is in session, the office is filled by a joint concurrent vote of the two branches. If a vacancy occurs when the legislature is not in session, the governor designates some one to act as secretary pro tempore.

The office is one of profit for the Commonwealth, the receipts for the past year exceeding $510,000 while the cost of maintenance was less than $120,000. The largest item of receipts was from corporations, over $463,000, with fees for commissions amounting to over $23,000 in second place.

The secretary issues all commissions for offices filled by the governor and council, some 5,000 each year, of which those for notary public and justices of the peace amount to over 4400 and for which a fee of $5 each is charged.

The recording of certificates of corporations, the recording of statements of condition of corporations and the recording of change of names of corporations is an important part of the secretary's duties. While the preliminary approval of the insurance commissioner on the chartering of insurance companies, and the approval of the Board of Bank Incorporation on the chartering of new banks and trust companies, is necessary before the secretary issues the formal charter, there are many forms of corporations on which the whole responsibility is on this office. Over 2700 corporations were chartered last year, most of them as trading corporations. It is interesting to note that about 60 per cent of these corporations drop out by the end of two years. At the present time there are over 10,000 active corporations now on the list.

In connection with the corporation work, the law allows the registration of trade marks, stamps and forms of advertisement by the secretary, over 600 being filed each year. The secretary also records the insignia, ribbons, badges, rosettes and other emblems of societies, associations and labor unions, under a law designed to protect those organizations from the work of imposters.

About 1000 foreign corporations, being corporations organized in other states than Massachusetts, also file returns with the secretary.

An important duty of the secretary while the legislature is in session is the engrossment of the various acts and resolves as they pass thru both branches. The engrossment is done on special typewriters using a peculiar upright form of script type, and the work is done on a fine grade of Crane's parchment paper. As stated last week, the lines must be continuous thruout, and without corrections or interlineations. At the close of the session when both branches are waiting for the engrossment of important bills, this division of the office works at high speed as well as under great tension.

The protection of the public records of the entire state, including the town, city and county, as well as of the state departments themselves now devolves on this office. A systematic inspection of all the 355 cities and towns of the state is made to see that the records are kept in good condition and are safe from the danger of fire. It is surprising how many public officials, particularly in the smaller towns, fail to see the necessity of protecting the records, not only of births, marriages and deaths, but of the public action of the municipality itself. In this connection, the secretary furnishes and requires all public records to be made with ink furnished by the Commonwealth or by typewriter ribbons approved by him.

An interesting duty of the secretary is to issue all proclamations from the governor, and it will be recalled that at the end of all such documents, occurs the attestation of the secretary, followed by the solemn words, "God

TAX RATE FIXED AT $25.40

Assessors Find Four Millions Increased Valuations and Jump Rate $1.40 per $1000

The Assessors on Saturday morning announced the tax rate for the current year at $25.40 per $1000 valuation, an increase of $1.40 over the rate of 1921. The valuations this year total $95,618,346, a gain of $4,024,546 over 1921, of which $712,296 is on personal property and $3,312,250 is in real estate. The gain in real estate being $2,391,500 in new buildings and $940,750 in revaluations, both of which are somewhat smaller than the previous year. The total personal property is valued at $13,478,496 and the total real estate is $82,139,850.

An analysis of the tax table shows that the aggregate of state, county and Metropolitan warrants is over $30,000 less than in 1921, the state tax alone showing a reduction of about $24,000. The big factor in the increased rate is found in the city budget, which stands at $2,859,641 this year as compared with $2,527,749 last year, or over $330,000 increase.

The items deducted from the total warrants show an increase of about $16,000 in estimated receipts, which stands this year at $470,000, a loss of $50,000 in income tax receipts, the figure this year being $253,000 in round numbers, and an item of $100,000 taken this year from Reserve account, with no corresponding item in 1921. The total amount to be raised by the tax levy standing at $2,429,705 as against $2,198,251 last year, the increase being wholly in the city budget.

A further analysis of the city budget, shows that the cost of the Street Department is $684,888 this year as compared with a total of $535,479 last year, the school department costs $861,843 this year as against $807,591 last year, while the Police, Fire and Health departments total $403,866 this year as against $369,553 last year.

It is fair to say that about $100,000 of the increase in the Street Department expenses is due to the new method of accounting and may, if properly supervised, come back to the city treasury in increased receipts. It is also fair to say that while the budget contains only the small item of $3100 to carry out this year the recent action of the aldermen in granting the firemen one day off in three, for part of the present year, it has committed the city to a policy, which will entail quite a heavy annual expense to maintain.

PROHIBITION NEWS

Contributed by and Published at the
Request of the Newton W. C. T. U.

KATHLEEN NORRIS, Noted Writer,
Pleads for Enforcement of Eighteenth Amendment

In Kathleen Norris, recognized as one of the most popular writers of fiction in the United States, the prohibition cause has an eloquent champion. She has enlisted heart and soul in the campaign in California to secure the passage of the state-wide enforcement measure. She is speaking to large audiences, and everywhere her messages call forth enthusiastic approval. Her success is so marked that the anti-prohibition newspapers are devoting editorial space to ridicule and condemnation of her efforts, the highest compliment that can be paid to her endeavors.

In speaking before a large company of women recently she said:

"I don't speak often. When I do make a speech I feel that I can be forgiven on the same grounds that the woman in the Bible was forgiven—because I love much. Today I am standing here because I love my country and because after a good many years of hard work, poverty, discouragement, illness—all the business of wifehood, motherhood, homekeeping—because now in these years I have a little freedom, and like many of the rest of you I have thought to myself, especially in my prayers, that I should be glad before I died to hand on to other women some little share of what love of country and love of God mean to me as a woman. We are all apt to look back into history and feel that in any of the great crises we could have shone brilliantly. We could have handled the work of Florence Nightingale—we could have been a noble Joan of Arc—but it seems to me today that as citizens we are facing an issue as great as any that the world has ever known."

The outstanding thought that Mrs. Norris drives home in her address is that the women must come to the rescue in this crucial time, and help to hold the law that has done so much to protect their homes and children. Her plea is to the mothers to live up to their responsibilities as loyal citizens in going to the polls and casting their ballots for the enforcement of the prohibition law, and to use their influence with other mothers, and with their husbands and brothers and friends, to work and vote for men favorable to the Eighteenth Amendment. One of her unique appeals to the patriotism of her audiences is made in these words:

"If anyone would be willing to tear down an American flag and wrap it around a garbage can, then he may consistently sneer at the non-enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment, but American patriots must not permit themselves to miss this opportunity for a patriotism fully as great as that offered by service at the front in the World War."

SUFFERING REDUCED DURING UNEMPLOYMENT PERIOD

Florence Kelly, of the National Consumers League

In spite of the inevitable local difficulties of enforcement, I have reason to believe that the suffering accompanying the period of unemployment was immensely reduced by the absence of both drunkenness and of moderate drinking in the families where there was unemployment.

Among the nurses who care for the sick poor in their homes, the testimony is uniform that preparation for confinement was more adequate and ability to pay a moderate sum for nursing care was far more widespread than ever before.

It cannot, of course, be definitely proved (by statistics and individual records) that tuberculosis has diminished because of prohibition, but the fall in the tuberculosis death rate since prohibition took effect is certainly a striking and suggestive coincidence, and taken in connection with the reports of the nurses, is most encouraging.

I have lived for twenty-three years at the Henry Street Settlement, in the lower East Side of New York, among the needletrade workers, and the office workers. My home, the Settlement, is the center of the nursing service. So what I say of their observations is first-hand news from the lowest levels of honest, self-respecting poverty.

Teachers in the public schools in the working class districts tell me that they are far less often called upon to buy or beg shoes for the pupils whose fathers are living. Widows have pensions. It was the children whose fathers drank who used to have to be clothed by the help of the teachers.

Finally, judges of the juvenile courts have told me on my travels in the service of the National Consumers League that they used to dread opening court on Monday morning because of the "unfit" guardian cases that they knew awaited them; now such cases are immeasurably fewer.

A WAR-TIME RECORD

"A War-time Record," an illustrated account of the war-time activities of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston, during the great World War, "1914-1918," is the title of a privately printed appreciative volume just issued by the Company. The book is well printed and bound. It gives a detailed account of its men in service, and it is interesting to note that of the 444 employees on the official honor roll, three were killed in action and eight died in the service of their country. The illustrations are fine examples of workmanship, and altogether the book is not only of interest as a souvenir, but of historical value.

HOW MASS. IS GOVERNED

Save the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Large numbers of certain proclamations are printed and distributed by the secretary's office, those of Lincoln Day, Arbor and Bird Day, Flag Day and Thanksgiving running over 10,000 each and are sent to churches, schools, postmasters and city and town clerks.

The secretary has charge of printing of all public documents comprising last year nearly 100,000 volumes for 87 different reports. These documents contained over 15,000 pages and cost over $76,000 for printing and binding. 17,000 copies of the pamphlet edition of the acts and resolves and 11,000 copies of the Blue book were printed. The public documents are kept in a room on the first floor of the State House for public distribution.

The secretary has charge of the collection and tabulation of the vital statistics of the state. Clerks of cities and towns make annual returns to him of all births, marriages and deaths and medical examiners report to him all cases which they are called upon to investigate.

Few persons realize the importance of complete and accurate records of vital statistics, and in consequence, particularly in the matter of births, constant efforts have to be made to obtain the desired information. No state or city claims 100 per cent birth registration but Massachusetts is well above the average of the country. Complete and authentic records of births are necessary in all questions relating to heredity, property rights, identity, as well as the enforcement of the child labor law.

There were over 91,000 live births in Massachusetts in 1920, with 1,006 pairs of twins and 6 cases of triplets. While the birth rate shows a decline, there is a net gain in population, due to a steady decrease in infant mortality during the past few years.

There were over 35,000 marriages recorded in 1920, and there is hardly any difficulty in obtaining complete records. The law requires the information furnished for a marriage license to be made under oath and also requires the clergyman or magistrate officiating at the ceremony to make a return of the time and place of the marriage. Marriage registration is maintained to protect the home and the family and to furnish reliable evidence on which to base the legitimacy of children and to protect the dower rights of women.

A return of divorces granted in the state is made to the secretary by the clerks of courts throughout the Commonwealth. Over 3,600 divorces were granted in 1920, and it is interesting to note that about three in every four applications for divorce are granted, while only 10 per cent were contested. Over two-thirds of the number granted were to women. The most common ground for divorce was desertion.

Massachusetts was one of the first American states to enforce dependable registration in births, marriages, and deaths; legislation being enacted as early as 1639, and Massachusetts was one of the two states reported in a Federal report of 1880 as having satisfactory registration laws on the matter of deaths. Over 47,000 deaths took place in the state in 1921, a death rate of 12.3 per 1,000—the lowest ever recorded here. The death rate has been steadily falling since 1890 when it stood at 19.4 per 1,000. A most gratifying fact is the steady decline in the rate for infant mortality, due to an actual reduction in the number of deaths of infants under 1 year of age. Boston has the honor of having infant welfare organizations which have been untiring in their baby-saving campaigns. Nearly one-third of the causes of death were from organic heart disease, pneumonia, and tuberculosis, the last being the cause of over 4,400 deaths. The medical examiners were called to over 6,300 cases, the largest number being in Suffolk County.

We shall leave to next week, a description of the important divisions of elections and of archives, as this article is already too long.

ARCHERY TOURNAMENT

Newton archers will be interested in the announcement made by Louis C. Smith, secretary-treasurer of the National Archery Association, that the forty-second annual tournament and convention will be known as the "Robin Hood Tournament," and will be held at Cooperstown, N. Y., August 22-25 next inclusive.

In making this announcement Mr. Smith, whose headquarters is at No. 613 Old South Building, Boston, tells of new trophies which are to be competed for this year by members of the association who come from all sections of the United States. Among these new trophies, which are in addition to those usually awarded at the annual tournaments, is an exceptionally handsome cup which is being given by Douglas Fairbanks, and will be known as "The Douglas Fairbanks Robin Hood Trophy." This cup is to be awarded for one year to the winner of a special Robin Hood contest in the nature of a long-range wand shoot.

STRANGE STORY OF MOON-STRUCK SPRING

It was in the year 1513 that Juan Ponce de Leon started out to explore the Bahama Islands in search of the "fountain of youth." He never found it nor did any one of the many who continued his miraculous quest, for the conviction that the spring so talked of by the native American Indians lay in the South was erroneous. The search was finally abandoned and the story disavowed and credited only as an Indian myth and fable of Spanish days.

Not until the early part of the nineteenth century did the wonderful tales of the "fountain" again begin to attract attention. The mystic stories of the Red Men were finally traced far up North to a wild primitive spot in Maine near the Canadian border. Near the top of a rugged granite mountain, known to those near about as Mount Zircron, a spring was discovered; a spring worshipped and carefully guarded by the neighboring tribes of Indians. The water of the spring was known as "Moon Tide Water" and was revered not only because of its wonderful curative powers, but also because of its truly remarkable property of gushing and ebbing with the full and waning of the moon, much as the tides of the sea.

As time went on the sublime healing powers of this water became proven and established. Scientific and medical men became interested and a number of strange phenomena were discovered. The maximum flow of the spring was found to be sixty-one gallons per minute and the minimum forty-two gallons per minute.

When the moon was at the full the spring gushed forth this maximum of clear, cold, and sparkling water. As the moon declined the flow gradually diminished until when the dark of the moon arrived the out-pouring of the spring was at the lowest point of forty-two gallons to the minute. It remained at this low level all through the phases of the new moon up to the day when came the first full moon, then in a flash suddenly changed from forty-two to sixty-one gallons a minute.

Scientists have never found an explanation. "It is brought about by the sea tides" is the usual comment, but it is far from a satisfactory reasoning in that the spring is sixteen hundred feet above the level of the sea and many, many miles from the coast, so that it seems difficult to believe that the sea water can exert any pressure. Moreover, if it did, why would not the rise and fall be identical with that of the tides? If there was a daily change in the flow, this explanation might satisfy.

Coincident with this attraction of the moon was that the spring bubbled up through a bed of clear white sand in the exact shape of a crescent. The water was never known to freeze and was found to hold a mean temperature of forty degrees Fahrenheit both winter and summer. Chemical analysis showed only 1.79 grains of solid in the dry state to a gallon, a really astounding degree of purity.

The spring has flowed year in and year out with unchanging constancy and unvarying quality, and the facts ascertained are the same today as they were a century or more ago.

Far from all contaminating influences, springing from depths unknown through the prophetic rocks and strata, Mount Zircron Water must represent Nature's choicest distillation. Boiling up through the white surface sand, it goes bubbling down the mountain side, cool, and sparkling, a sight that gladdens the heart of the beholder. Its peculiar softness and purity make it an enticing beverage, and those once habituated to its use will prefer it to the choicest products of the vineyard.

A study of the physiological action of Mount Zircron Water explains somewhat why it proves so efficacious in so many different diseases. The action of the water is of a solvent and cleansing nature, being in fact, as the eminent Dr. A. A. Hayes says in his analysis of Mount Zircron, a "very weak solution of a kind of soap of natural origin." It has a peculiar effect upon the mucous membrane in cleansing its surface and reducing inflammation. Nearly all diseases have their rise from the clogged state of the system. The mucous membrane, of course, extends throughout the digestive tract, and the first symptoms of trouble are experienced from a disordered state of the stomach, bowels, liver, or kidneys. The water has a powerful diuretic effect, neutralizes the acid condition, and cleanses the mucous surfaces, thus setting the secretions at work. The food, consequently, is readily rendered soluble by digestion and conveyed to the tissues to be assimilated. On the other hand, the effete matters in the system are rendered soluble by disassimilation and conveyed back into the blood current by the water to be acted upon or eliminated through the kidneys, skin pores, or other organs. The company which handles the bottling and distributing of Mount Zircron Water has, as one of its slogans, the sentence, "Zircron will not only make you well, but it will keep you well." It is highly recommended by many physicians for diseases of the stomach, bowels, kidneys, or bladder, and also as a tonic to increase vigor and vitality. It is popular as a table water among the better classes, and is especially favored by those who wish to keep themselves in athletic trim and fitness.

Here in Newton a ginger champagne, made from Mount Zircron water and bottled at the famous spring, is proving very popular as a light beverage. Several of the local stores have added it to their line of bottled goods and it is being served at soda fountains throughout the city. The drink is similar to ginger ale, but is considered by many to be far superior in quality. The secret of its success lies in that it is made from this wonderful "Water of Health," the best of fruits and real ginger root. It has the snap of ginger ale, combined with a champagne lightness and flavor that does not flatten.

A distributing office for the Mount Zircron Spring is maintained in Boston and excellent service is furnished to customers in Newton. The steady demand for Mount Zircron Water shows that the people realize today as they did in the time of Leon's time that there is nothing that will so quickly restore health and vigor as pure water. The purer the water, the better the result. A trial of Mount Zircron will convince those who doubt or think ordinary city or spring water is good enough.

EDITORIAL

The tax payers of this city have an opportunity at the first meeting of the aldermen this fall, on Sept. 11th, to register their opinion on the proposed seizure of three lots of land adjoining the present Underwood school, as a site for the proposed new building to take the place of the old school house. No one will question the wisdom of taking the Howard lot at the corner of Vernon and Baldwin streets, but it seems as if the seizure of the Whiting property on Baldwin street and the Byfield property on Eldredge street is far from necessary. With Farlow park directly across the street and with the Burr playground only a few hundred yards away, there is certainly no need of land for playground purposes and the city is in no financial position to purchase taxable property merely to give a school building a handsome setting. Here is an opportunity for our taxpayers to show their interest in saving the city some $15,000 in land damages.

All things considered, the tax payers of Newton may congratulate themselves that the tax rate as declared this week by the Assessors is only $1.40 increase over last year. With the loss of $50,000 of receipts from the income tax due to the working of the law passed several years ago, whereby the apportionment of the income tax was to be gradually based on the state tax and the heavy increase in city expenses, it was evident that large increases must be found in valuations if the tax rate was to be kept within a reasonable figure. This the Assessors have evidently been able to do, altho the enlarged overlay seems to indicate that some abatements may be necessary.

Every householder ought to read the letter printed in another column from Mr. Oliver M. Fisher, the Fuel Administrator for Newton, in regard to the coal situation. Mr. Fisher pays a deserved tribute to the coal dealers of Newton and the manner in which they are conducting their business under these unusual conditions.

NO PROFITEERING HERE

To the Editor:
It seems unfortunate that any space in your columns should be given to any communication that would serve to stir up our already excited population regarding the coal situation in Newton. Your, correspondent, Mr. Barnes, in last week's issue, seems to feel that our retail coal dealers in Newton are profiteering, which is not the case, and your correspondent should have more correctly stated facts in connection with his experiences.

Pea coal is a by-product produced by all dealers against their will, and not freely bought by consumers unless they have to. Consequently, this is the only coal that any dealer has on hand at the present time, as the stocks of larger sizes on hand have been practically exhausted in the hands of our retail dealers. In order to make the small stock of larger sizes hold out as long as possible, our dealers are rightly asking consumers to take some Pea coal along with Nut, Stove, or Egg coal, but never do our dealers ask their customers to pay the same price for Pea coal as for the sizes known as Nut, Stove, or Egg.

At present, the prevailing prices in Newton for Stove or Nut coal is $15.00; for Egg or Furnace coal, $14.75; while the usual price for Pea coal is $13.00. If a dealer asks a customer to take an equal amount of Pea coal, it is always billed out to customers at the price for each size of coal or an average price, based upon half Pea coal and half large size; for example, with Pea coal at $13.00 and Nut or Stove coal at $15.00, a ton of these two mixed might reasonably be billed out at $14.00, which would be identical to the same as the customer paying $13.00 for Pea coal and $15.00 for Nut or Stove. These are the prices now prevailing, brought about by the present-day conditions, over which none of us in Newton have any control.

As Fuel Administrator of the City of Newton, I wish to emphasize this fact, that the retail dealers of Newton are not profiteering or adopting any questionable tactics. They are simply distributing their coal to their customers in small quantities in the sizes adapted to their customers' needs, as far as possible, consistent with the stocks the dealers have on hand. The present price is based upon the cost of present coal they have on hand. A plain business proposition. When the present stock on hand is exhausted and the coal is obtained through other channels, as through the Storrow Committee, a readjustment of prices will be necessary, to cover the cost of the coal as received.

In Newton we shall be a little short of the usual supply of the usual sizes of coal through the early fall and winter, but there need be no anxiety or excitement about the present situation and communications like that in your last week's issue serve no good purpose with the general public, as it is not based upon the actual facts and does not prevail in Newton. Our citizens should each do their part to help along in the general welfare of all, and be very careful that any statements they make in public are based upon actual facts, rather than a misunderstanding which could be easily explained if an opportunity were given, without rushing into print.

We have enough genuine profiteers in our communities today, without adding to their number from our coal dealers, who are certainly not in that class. Having lived with them and been in close touch with them for many years, I can frankly say that there is no better class of men in business anywhere than the retail coal dealers of Newton, and through their honest efforts to take care of the wants of their customers, the coal situation in Newton during wartime was the best and the easiest of any town or city in Massachusetts, and we intend it shall remain in that same class.

Any consumers who have a small stock of the larger sizes of coal on hand, would do well to get some Pea coal from their retail dealers as soon as possible out of their present stock on hand, and thus put themselves on easy street to begin the winter. Where, for any reason, consumers find it difficult to get orders filled through their regular channels, it will be the duty of the Fuel Administrator of Newton to assist them as much as possible.

We invite the COOPERATION of ALL of our citizens.

Yours very truly,
O. M. FISHER
Fuel Administrator, City of Newton.

TO PROTECT WATER SUPPLY

The State Public Health Council granted a hearing Tuesday on the petition of the city of Newton that the council determine the occupancy of a ten acre tract of land on the western side of the Charles River in Newton Upper Falls to be injurious to the water supply of the city. The action is to permit the city to take the land by eminent domain to protect its water supply.

City Solicitor Joseph W. Bartlett and City Engineer Rogers told the council that the land is now being occupied by campers and by persons who have erected summer cottages, and that, because of the absence of a sewerage system, injurious matter is likely to find its way into the river. About twenty owners of camps and cottages attended the hearing and protested against any action which would deprive them of their camp sites. A. L. Woodman, attorney for Neil McIntosh, promoter of the property, asked that some other means be sought to protect the water supply, if necessary, without taking the land. The petition was taken under advisement.

WINS NASH PRIZE

Byron D. Wilkerson, 43 Woodcliffe street, Newton Highlands, has been awarded $25 in gold by the C. P. Rockwell, Inc., New England distributors of Nash cars and trucks, for writing the best letter in the Nash letter writing contest.

The letters of Ruth A. Tilston of 27 Radford lane, Dorchester, and Charles Schwer of 628 Watertown street, Newtonville, were also given recognition, despite the fact that there was only one prize offered in the contest. They were both awarded $10 gold pieces for their efforts.

CAMP FRANK A. DAY

The Newton Y. M. C. A. camp, Camp Frank A. Day, brought its 1922 season to a most successful conclusion during the past week with its Field Day and Banquet, and a memorable visit from Mayor Childs.

With the athletic program of the season furnishing finals in tennis, track and swimming, and the dramatic program offering the annual minstrel show in the evening, Field Day provided innumerable thrills and smiles for the parents and visitors who braved the threatening weather to be present at the most eventful day of the entire season. The finals of the Junior and Senior tennis tournaments in the morning resulted in victories for Hayward Woolston of Newtonville and Nathan Cohen of Cambridge. The exhibition flag-raising at 1.45 P. M. showed those present that patriotic spirit and respect for the Flag at Camp Day are in now wise lacking. Immediately following the flag-raising the track and field finals were run off on the camp ball field, which was in splendid shape for the occasion. Hayward Woolston, Samuel Moore and Winnie Mercer stood out as consistently high class performers. At the swimming meet which followed Lloyd Osborne, brother of "Shad" Osborne, the Newton High School athlete, excelled for the Juniors, while Breed, Sundlie and Moore were the stars in the Senior class. Robert Condit of Waban won the Junior Single Canoe race, while Samuel Moore of Newtonville had little trouble in capturing first place in the Senior Single Canoe race.

Preceding the track and swimming meets a "Pajama Drill" was held in front of the tents in order to show visitors the program that is carried through every morning immediately after reveille. The campers and leaders seemed surprisingly wide-awake for ninety fellows clad in pajamas and purporting to have just risen from slumber.

An unusually large audience of visitors were present for the big minstrel and vaudeville show in the evening. A regulation minstrel show of 45 minutes duration opened the evening's program. And then followed five acts of dancing, magic and music. Kenneth Merrill of Newtonville displayed unexpected talent as a clog dancer; Dwight Shepler and Roger Salinger of the same section of the city fooled everyone with their clever tricks at "Black Magic", while Dr. Smith, Milton Edgar, and Donald Cunningham, representing the Camp Council, presented a scintillating musical act. Anthony Gleason of Newtonville preached a great sermon in the guise of a negro parson, and the appreciation of the audience inspired every would-be actor to such a pitch of perfection that nothing but praise was heard for the entire show, which was in charge of "DOC" Doubleday, the Assistant Director.

Mayor Childs' talk at the morning service on Sunday will not soon be forgotten by those who had the pleasure of listening to him. Pointing out that it is the duty of everyone to grow continually, the Mayor laid down a splendid set of rules and suggestions which a boy or man might well follow in his growth and development. It was only fitting that the Mayor should address the members of the biggest boys' camp maintained by the citizens of Newton.

Wednesday evening, August 16, found every boy at his place in the Mess Hall awaiting the best and most successful banquet ever held at Camp Day. Chef George Conroy, and his assistants, outdid themselves, while good cheer and comradeship added the necessary spirit to make the banquet a huge success. Starting in with chicken, soup, apples, nuts, and radishes, the campers enjoyed broiled chicken, French fried potatoes, green peas, garden salad, toasted crackers, ice cream and cake, watermelon, iced tea, and milk. Then came the presentation of the cups, medals, and prizes. Seven silver cups were awarded, the most coveted of them all, the Efficiency Cup, being awarded to Richard Breed, of Watertown. Winchester Junior Rifle Corps Medals, Camp Emblems, Gold Medals for first places in the track and swimming meets, and ribbons for seconds and thirds were given to the boys who had won them on the Field Day just preceding. Speeches by the leaders, some of the campers, and the Chef, gave numerous opportunities for applause and the expression of the appreciation on the part of everybody for the splendid time that has been had at Camp Day this summer. A substantial purse of gold was given to the cook and his first assistant, and Camp Day Pennants were awarded to Tent One for its splendid and performance of Camp, Tent, and Dining Room duties during the past season.

On Friday morning campers and leaders gathered in front of tents to say farewell. "Jake" Stafford, one of Newton's famous athletes, "Bordie" Adams, a Williams captain, "Hoddie" Cole, the Andover hurdler, "Doc" Doubleday, the most popular man in camp, and all the other splendid men on the camp staff reluctantly admitted the time for parting had come, and, ninety-five strong, the Campers from Camp Day, headed toward East Brookfield to take the train for another winter of the wonderful summer they spent on the shores of Lake Quaquam-quasit, at Camp Frank A. Day.

AUTO ACCIDENT

Nellie De Gregorio, 7 years of age, was injured Tuesday morning when she was struck by an automobile on Watertown street near her home. The little girl had been riding on the rear of a tipcart and she jumped off and ran in front of an automobile owned and operated by Arthur White of 512 Powder House boulevard, Somerville. Mr. White took the child to the Newton Hospital.

Garden City Encampment will meet Monday evening for the first meeting after vacation.

NEW YORK IN FIRST PLACE

American Metropolis Has Crowded Out London as the Largest City in the World.

New York has surpassed London in population, according to the New York city census committee, if the same radius of territory is included within the New York city limits as is calculated in the London figures. In a statement issued by Dr. Walter Laidlaw, executive secretary, figures show that within a radius of nineteen miles of the City hall there was on January 1, 1920, a population of 344,508 more persons than in the metropolitan police district of "Greater London," says the New York Herald.

Greater London, it is explained, includes not only London county, but an "outer ring" in which the metropolitan police have specified powers and duties. The Greater London suburban area, irregular in outline, extends as far in some directions as nineteen miles from Charing Cross," says Dr. Laidlaw. "It seems proper, therefore, to include in comparing Greater London and New York suburban territory within nineteen miles of the City hall."

This radius reaches Tottenham, Staten Island; part of Westchester and Nassau counties, and the part of New Jersey that includes Newark, Jersey City and other large population centers immediately adjacent to New York.

The population of Greater London on June 19, 1921, was 7,476,188, while that of "Largest New York," including the outlying districts, on January 1, 1920, was 7,829,676. London increased in the thirty years between 1891 and 1920, 1,844,362 persons, while Largest New York increased, between 1900 and 1910, 1,879,546 persons.

SIAM HAS LEPER "VILLAGE"

Plague-Stricken Patients Fill Offices in the Town Government and Assist in Work.

A progressive Siamese leper "village" is described by the Bangkok correspondent of the London Daily Mail. Wonderful progress has been made during recent times with regard to the treatment of lepers in this neighborhood, many scores having been housed at the Chienklang leper asylum, which was established with the joint aid of the Siamese government and the mission to lepers some thirteen years ago.

This asylum is run on the lines of a Siamese village, with a village headman chosen by the lepers themselves. The leper has been made to think that he is still a useful citizen of the state, and not a social outcast as heretofore. They work under their headman, look after the roads, and attend to the clearing of the jungles.

There are two schools within the settlement for children of the lepers and the attendance is good, despite the fact that most of the pupils suffer from the terrible disease. The plague-stricken boys and girls, with their nerveless, deformed fingers, work as hard as their more fortunate leprosy-free schoolmates in the other school of the asylum.

The asylum has its own currency, so that the coins can be avoided by the outside world.

Steam Shovels Disturb Indians' Sleep.

The slumbers of prehistoric Indians buried in the Southwest before the time of Christ will be rudely disturbed this summer by the raucous growl of the modern steam shovel.

Self-dumping cars, trackage, derricks and other up-to-date paraphernalia will be used for scientific excavation in the ancient Pueblo Bonito, in Chaco canyon, by Dr. Neil M. Judd, curator of American archeology of the Smithsonian Institution.

Doctor Judd left Washington to conduct this work under the auspices of the National Geographic society. He thinks his work may result in connecting the period in which these Pueblo Indians lived with the Mayan race in British Honduras, of whom there is record as far back as 95 B. C.

Mosquitoes Dislike These Odors.

Where mosquitoes abound, a preparation combining one ounce of oil of citronella with four ounces of melted vaseline should be rubbed on the face and hands. Persons who object to the odor of citronella could use this: castor oil one ounce, alcohol one ounce, oil of lavender one ounce. Both preparations were used by workers in the Panama canal zone and gave great relief until the extermination of mosquitoes was undertaken. Neither preparation should be allowed to get into the eyes.

Miles of Wire in This Apparatus.

A million-volt transformer of 1,000 KVA capacity is being built by a leading electric company for its experimental laboratory at Trafford City, Pa. The windings of this transformer contain nearly 70 miles of wire. The terminal bushing is the largest ever built in the Westinghouse shops. Special machines had to be fitted to turn the bushing on this account. Its length is 19 feet, and it is 4 1/4 inches in diameter. The static shield will be 10 feet in diameter and 20 inches deep. The bushing will weigh about 9,000 pounds when completed.

STREET MUSIC

I suppose that the miracle and mystery plays which were moved around from one place to another in large vans, were the forerunners of the musicians who now play on the public squares. Perhaps the troubadours and troubadours of northern and southern France inspired their descendants to earn their livings on street corners. Whatever is the origin, we have always heard of music, one kind or another, made on the thoroughfares of well populated towns or cities.

My attention was called the other day to crowds of children running in one direction. It could not be a fire, or even a circus or a brass band! I soon discovered that the center of attraction was an old fashioned hurdy-gurdy. This brought back the memories of my earlier childhood, when a lean horse pulling a "leaner" wagon up the street meant that we were going to hear tinnypenny music ground out from an elaborately decorated piano-like object. We seemed hungry for just this kind of music, although the tunes, too, had reached their prime at least five years before.

I remember the fascination in seeing and hearing a Scotchman playing a bagpipe. Whether it was the interest caused by the plaid "kilt" he wore, or the monotonous drone of his bagpipe that made me stand and listen, it will be a question in my mind. Probably the novel costume and the unusual sound were sufficient reasons.

How happy I was when I was able to give him a penny or two in order to keep him playing a little longer!

The greatest event of the summer, was when a hand-organ man with a monkey came to the hotel or cottage where I was staying. This monkey was dressed in a little green swallow tail coat, brown velvet trousers, and a little red cap. The clothes were so cunning and their owner was so human, many people gathered about him as he danced, jumped, and sometimes squeaked, to the music his master was making. He would venture into the circle of spectators as far as his leash would allow him to, searching for any food we might have in our hands or pockets. Often we had an orange or an apple for him, and he would take it carefully in his hand-like paws to his master's pocket. Then, after he had passed his little cap around for pennies, he would jump on to his master's shoulder and they would pass on to the next audience.

We still hear a violin now and then on the street, or possibly a bagpipe, but crowds no longer listen to such music. Only an unusual doll dancing to the latest "jazz" records attracts any attention. The thrills I used to get at the sound of the hurdy-gurdy, would mean nothing at all to the present young people. Their minds are bent on something more hair-raising. Probably street music will continue to exist, but in another generation it will be as different from what it is today, as the miracle plays are from the hand-organ.

John D. Rockefeller

attributes his success to the fact that he always made the other fellow put his proposition down in Black and White.

That's what the merchants of this town are doing for you. Their advertisements speak for themselves in black and white. And what they put down in black and white they stand back of.

They want your business. Their advertisements are an invitation to do business with them.

That's why they advertise, and the wise housekeeper never does her shopping nowadays until she has read the advertisements and posted herself on prices.

Is there an easier or better way of saving money? It only requires a few minutes of your time to scan the advertisements.

The Boy Scout's motto is "Be Prepared."

That's what every housewife should be when she goes out to market.

Read the advertisements and you will not alone save many times the cost of the subscription to this paper, but you will save many dollars to add to your bank account.

Reading advertisements in this paper is profitable reading. Try it for a month and check up the pennies you will save.

That's another Rockefeller maxim: "Save your pennies and the dollars will take care of themselves."

There are hundreds of pennies to be saved by reading the advertisements in this paper every issue.

Looking In on Congress From the House Gallery

WHAT THE HOUSE IS LIKE

By CONGRESSMAN GUY U. HARDY

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.

When I was a boy I heard a story of three blind men who were taken to "see" an elephant. They were led up to the animal and each felt the first part he came in contact with and went away. In describing it afterward one of the blind men said that an elephant was like a rope, he having felt the tail; another said it was more like a palm leaf fan, he having felt its ear; and the third said it did not resemble either but, was a big flat object something like a stone wall covered with a leathery skin with some hair on it. Each was speaking from his own point of view and telling only of what he had seen—or rather felt.

It is that way with many things in life. We see only a very small part, yet having seen that, we think that we are competent to judge, describe and criticize.

An hour or two in the gallery would certainly give one a very lopsided view of congress. Yet many come, look on for a few moments and go away to tell of congress as they have seen it, a good deal as the blind men told of the elephant and with fully as much accuracy.

If you were a casual caller in the gallery you might find the house full of members, or only half full, or even with only a few dozen present. You might find it doing routine business and as quiet and placid as a summer calm; or excited to fever heat by a partisan discussion between party leaders, or in a storm of agitation over a question of personal privilege or the exercise of personal rights. The house has its varying moods, as human beings have. Sometimes it works along doing business rapidly and as smoothly as clock work. And sometimes everything seems to be on edge and everybody on his nerves, when one could hardly get an amendment through to dot an "i" or cross a "t" without a fight and a roll call.

Cannot Always Be on the Floor.

Members need not sit on the floor all the time. They have much to do besides. Much of the business of congress is transacted in the committees. The major committees are composed of from 21 to 35 members each. Some of the committee meetings are as important and formal as the meeting of a state senate and with about equal membership. Committees are frequently meeting while the house is in session. There is also much office work to be done and members take advantage of every lull in proceedings to catch up with their office work. There is always departmental work to be taken care of, but members as a rule do not go down town in the afternoon when the house is in session. Most members stay within reach of the roll call signals.

Whether your member is on the floor or not, you may depend upon it that he knows pretty well what is going on and can easily be reached when his presence is required.

The greatest safeguard is thrown about legislation to keep anyone from putting something over. Much is done by unanimous consent when a single member can object and stop or stay proceedings. A member may at any time question the presence of a quorum and if the speaker does not find a quorum present by actual count the roll is called. Signal bells ring in the corridors, restaurant and house office building so that members may appear and answer to their names. Whenever a member is fearful that something will be done except by consideration of the whole house, he can raise the question of a quorum and a quorum must be secured before business is further considered.

A quorum in the house consists of a majority of its membership. There are 435 members when all are alive and there are no vacancies—although there are often two or three vacancies on account of death or resignation. So it usually requires 217 or 218 members to make a quorum. When the house is doing business as the committee of the whole 100 members make a quorum.

Reasons for Demanding a Quorum.

The point of no quorum is raised often because a member wants a full attendance when the question before the house is considered. It is raised sometimes because some one present wants a good audience for an important speech. It is raised occasionally merely in order to delay the game and is resorted to by the minority to use up the time and postpone or defeat legislation that cannot be defeated by a majority vote. It is frequently used when a filibuster is in progress, and sometimes the roll is called six or eight times a day. As it requires 35 or 40 minutes to call the roll it can be seen how a few roll calls will block the business of the day.

Occasionally the point of no quorum will be raised out of spite. A member may desire some time to speak and those in charge of the time may feel that they have none at their disposal or for some reason do not wish to yield the gentleman time. The gentleman with a grievance may conclude that he will block the business of the house for a time by causing a roll call. I have seen a member state frankly on the floor that if he cannot get the time desired he will feel it his duty to raise the question of a quorum. Some times the gentleman in control of the time will give in and yield the time desired, and sometimes he will call the other gentleman's bluff. These incidents do not occur very often.

Once in a while a little filibuster is resorted to by the minority or by an obstreperous member who wants to force consideration of some special matter. Then the roll calls come thick and fast. One day the committee on rules tried to get a rule adopted, giving four hours for debate on a certain bill. The minority took a notion to block the game and it took a day and a half of roll calls to get the rule passed.

Some bills are passed by the majority of those present without a roll call. But any member can always demand a quorum and if a quorum is not present a roll call on the bill automatically follows. And even if a quorum is present, twenty per cent of those present can always demand and secure a roll call on any proposition.

Too Much Talking, of Course.

There is much unnecessary talking in the house. Nobody realizes that so much as those who have to be present and listen to much of it. The same thing is true wherever men and women congregate—especially where they meet to consider matters of public concern. As a reporter I have sat up past midnight listening to rambling, unnecessary talk over some trivial matter at a small town council meeting where only eight or nine members had to agree on a policy.

Some freedom must be given to those who want to talk. Some opportunity must be given for all sides to be heard. It requires consideration and explanation and talk sometimes to get many minds to look at the subject in the same way.

There is too much unnecessary talk in the house, but I do not see how it could be eliminated. Who is to say what talk may be made and what talk shall not be made? Who is so wise that he may be set up as a censor?

It is not so bad in the house as in the senate. In the senate there is no limit on debate. In the house debate is always limited, usually to one or two hours, occasionally to four hours, and perhaps twice in recent years to 12 hours on very important measures. Congress is often criticised for being slow in doing business. Of course it is slow. It is made up of human beings of many minds. They come from all parts of a great country stretching from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The representatives represent peoples and communities as diversified and as far apart in thoughts and interests as they are in distance. It requires time for these representatives of these various minds and interests to weigh and consider and amend and whip into shape and finally agree upon proposed legislation that is to be written for a hundred and ten millions of people and may run for all time. It necessarily takes time for a majority of 435 members to be brought to see things alike.

This is one of the necessary results of a republican form of government. It is not so in an autocracy. It is not so in Russia. There you get quick action. By a decree from the autocrats the lands are confiscated. By a decree anything can be done quickly. But by parliamentary procedure it takes time for just and due consideration.

But after all congress is not so slow as compared with other governing bodies in a republic. Consider your own city council, your own board of county commissioners, your own state legislature. Who has not tried for years and years to get a certain street light placed, a street crossing fixed up, a city street cut through, a city park established, the city streets paved, a country road defined or a bridge built or this or that law amended, changed, repealed or passed? Let that individual who has never seen these long delays in getting worthy propositions put through the governing body at home, where every member knows the conditions like a book, throw the first rock at congress.

Requirements for Members.

The Constitution provides that a representative must have attained the age of twenty-five, have been a citizen of the United States for seven years and shall be an inhabitant of the state in which he is elected. There is no law specifying that a representative must be a resident of the district he represents, although it is very unusual for a district to elect a representative residing in another district. It is done occasionally in New York City. A senator must be thirty years of age, at least nine years a citizen of the country and an inhabitant of the state electing him.

WHERE THE WEST BEGINS

Billings is bidding for more manufacturing plants, basing its arguments upon location, natural resources, availability of labor and the spirit of local support and interest shown by its men of affairs.

The city is an important railway center and distributing point. It is the connecting point of the Burlington route with the Northern Pacific Railway and the Great Northern Railway.

Billings is the center of the oil industry of Montana because of its location near the activities in oil operations in the state and also in northern Wyoming, and its advantages as a distributing center.

The largest beet sugar company in the world is the Great Western Sugar Company. It operates 16 factories, located in Colorado, Nebraska, Wyoming and Montana. They devour the beets raised on 280,000 acres of land at the rate of 26,000 tons per day, and turn out 7,000,000 hundred pound bags of sugar each year.

One of these, a $1,250,000 plant is located at Billings. It is the sixth largest of its kind in the world and is the only sugar factory in Montana. Since it began operations in 1906 it has produced 558,634,100 pounds of sugar, 617,482 tons of pulp and 25,434 tons of molasses.

The Billings factory slices 2,400 tons of beets each day, and turns out about 400,000 hundred-pound bags of sugar annually, when running at capacity. Three-fourths of this sugar is sold in Montana, the balance in the Dakotas. The factory uses 450 tons of coal and 110 tons of lime rock—both dug from the soil of Montana—each day during the operating season.

Late that night we entrained again, bound for Cody and the famous Yellowstone Park. Cody itself, is on top of the bluffs at the other side of the river, from the railroad station of that name and we did not visit it. It is said to have many interesting relics of Buffalo Bill, for whom it is named. Our start for the park was not an auspicious one, as the proprietor of the hotel or restaurant, where we were to have breakfast, although notified of our numbers, thought he could get by with an ordinary corps of waiters, and in consequence, many of our party had to wait over an hour for a very poor breakfast. However, that was soon past and we filled a score or more of the Park busses—each holding eleven passengers and the driver. The superintendent of the Park, Mr. H. M. Albright, who was one of the first to greet us at Cody, invited me to ride in his machine and we led the long procession over the famous Cody road to the Park some 70 miles away.

The Cody Road is a pioneer's trail blazed through a region primeval, and in all the distance from Cody to the Park there is no suggestion of anything else. No stores, no shops, no furnace smoke, no "social etiquette"—nothing but the great rugged West—crude, heroic and cordial. The visitor-tourist finds no signboards warning him off the grass or forbidding him to enter "private grounds."

The semi-arid, treeless surroundings of Cody give one no conception of the sights and scenes, symbolic of the great and wonderful works of both God and man, he is soon to behold. Crossing to and following the north bank of the Shoshone (pronounced with three syllables) River, a geyser basin, similar, to those in Yellowstone and now extinct but for the famous DeMaris medicinal hot springs, is passed and the giant canyon of the Shoshone River is entered. This canyon is about six miles long, formed by the almost perpendicular sides of Rattlesnake and Cedar mountains, rising above the river to a tremendous height—rocky, jagged and almost barren of vegetation. Through this canyon and along the face of Rattlesnake Mountain, Cody Road has been blasted and chiseled in and through the solid rock, passing through as many as five tunnels in less than a mile—as carefully constructed and smooth as a boulevard. Following the river for some distance, now level with it, now overlooking it from sheer, giddy heights, always gradually rising, the road finally reaches a point above the top of the great Shoshone dam.

Possibly few of us realized the extraordinary character of this dam. Its width across the canyon is but 200 feet, while its depth from crest to foundation is over 325 feet and its thickness at the base is 108 feet. It forms a reservoir for the flood waters of the Shoshone River, a river into which drains the snows of many of the mountains in Yellowstone park. This reservoir is 12 miles long, has a surface area of 10 square miles and reaches a depth of 230 feet. The water thus stored irrigates a territory of 125,000 acres extending for 50 miles down the river valley.

The character of the country changes as the National Forest Reserve is approached. Vegetation is more luxuriant, and the evergreen becomes one of the principal features of the landscape. The river narrows and becomes increasingly boisterous as it is more and more hemmed in by the growing proximity of the mountains. From this point, for some miles, the mountains are very irregular and the red sandstone of the near-by ridges commences to assume fantastic shapes. Little imagination is required to note the many curious shapes in these peculiar formations, some of which have been appropriately named the Dead Indian, Hole in the Wall, Sleeping Giant, Clock Tower, Pinnacle Point, Statuary Hill, Chimney Rock, and so on.

Possibly the most natural formation is entitled "Henry Ford" and is an almost perfect representation of a man apparently driving an automobile. There are several ranches in this part of the country, originally started for farming or cattle raising, but found that boarders were more profitable. They have been dubbed "dude" ranches and many of them have more business than they can accommodate. We made a short visit to Holm Lodge, one of the best, and found it a most pleasant place to rest.

We had lunch at Pahaska Tepee, a charming rustic building outside the entrance to the park.

Device Measures Breathing.
Oxygen breathed in by any person can be measured by a newly designed apparatus.

THE COUNTRY EDITOR

I hesitate to estimate his service to the preservation of national sanity and good temper. It thrills me every time I reflect on these several generations of splendid men who, with a bit of humor tucked away in their souls and a deathless devotion to something they loved, cherished their ideals in secret and drew on them to refresh their faith in a lifetime of quiet service to their communities.

TAX RATE $25.40

$465,000. An excellent showing is made by Waban, with $411,000, and Newton Highlands with $406,000. The south side of Newtonville does well with $378,000, while Chestnut Hill, small in area, increases some $212,000.

The personal property valuations also show a gain in each precinct save the north side of West Newton, where there is a loss of $19,000. The Mt. Ida precinct leads in personal gains with an increase of $223,000.

Dust storms sometimes last 20 or 30 hours.

WHERE WASHINGTON WORSHIPED

HISTORY shows that the plot of ground on which stands Christ church, in the quaint, old-fashioned town of Alexandria, Virginia, first settled about 1635, was acquired in 1794 for the sum of one penny.

Around this sacred relic of by-gone days perhaps revolves more patriotic sentiment than that which surrounds any other of the many old and historic churches in this nation. An iron fence, set upon an ancient brick wall, encloses a grassy plot which is dotted with many quaint grave stones and also contains the church itself.

Although certain interior changes and renewals necessarily have been made, the general appearance of the church is practically the same as in the days of old. The same chancel rail, communion table, reading desk and chairs and brass candle holders are in use, while among the relics in the vestry may be seen the first bible used—made in Scotland in 1776, and the long-handled pews in which the offerings of the parishioners were deposited.

It was to this church, both before and after the revolution as well as after retiring from the presidency, that General George Washington came from Mount Vernon, in his "coach and four", to worship. The pew occupied by the Washington family, as well as the one used by General Robert E. Lee, are maintained in exactly the same condition as when used by them.

DEATH OF MR. BROOKE

Before his retirement from active life Mr. Brooke had long been in the hay and grain business and was located in the Brighton section. He was especially active in Masonry, and was a member of Winslow Lodge of Boston, Royal Arch Chapter and Gethsemane Commandery of Newton, and Aleppo Temple of Boston.

Mr. Brooke is survived by his widow, Lizzie D. Brooke, and a daughter, Mrs. Stanton F. Slocum of Allston.

Mr. Brooke has been a resident of Newton for 38 years. The funeral was held yesterday afternoon at the Newton Cemetery chapel, the officers of Winslow Lodge conducting a Masonic service.

WHERE THE WEST BEGINS

Being the story of the annual meeting of the National Editorial Association

Our visit to Yellowstone Park was a revelation to me. For weeks I had been reading up on the marvels of the Park, and almost knew by heart what the great writers of the country had said about it. But the realization in my case, contrary to the general custom, was better than anticipation, so much so that I desire now to return some day and enjoy it over again at my leisure.

If you like the beauty of a peaceful valley and massive mountains,—it is here,—if you enjoy the view of a great lake, surrounded with snow-capped mountains, it is here,—if you delight in the music of water fall,—you will find it here in the superlative degree,—and if you wish to see marvellous forces of Nature venting their power in almost uncanny fashion in geysers and hot springs, it is here you will find the largest basin of its kind in the world.

Two miles from Pahaska we came to the East entrance to the Park, and one of the many ranger camps throughout the Park. From here the road climbs steadily higher and higher, and the mountains come in a little closer and even closer. As the road winds up the valley of the creek, we come to Sylvan Pass, some ten miles from the entrance and 8,650 feet above the sea. Just before we reach the pass the road makes a peculiar cork-screw turn, in such a fashion that it crosses itself with a bridge, forming a complete loop. Mr. Albright told us that this road over Sylvan Pass had only been open about three weeks and that five weeks before there was 40 feet of snow packed over the road, requiring some six tons of TNT to break it up. Sylvan Lake is close to the Pass at an altitude of 8,350 feet. A drop of some three hundred feet in about ten miles brought us to Turbid Lake, to which we gave but little thought until we got a whiff of its sulphurous contents, when we were pleased to have the car speeded up a bit to pass it as quickly as possible. We grew rather familiar with that odor, by the way, as it is characteristic of all the geyser basins in the Park.

A little beyond we came to Yellowstone Lake, a body of water about the same size and with the same general appearance of Lake Winnipegesaukee, although the mountains which surround it are higher than those in New Hampshire. The Lake itself is over 7,700 feet above sea level. Superintendent Albright had made arrangements for some of our party to go fishing and I greatly appreciated an invitation to join the party. The wooden bridge over the Yellowstone river, a few hundred yards from where it leaves the Lake, is a favorite place for fishermen and there are usually from 20 to 30 devotees of Isaac Walton at this point. We had the use of a motor boat and went up stream nearly to the Lake, where we fished for nearly two hours, with excellent luck with sixteen fine cut throat trout on our string. I am not much of a fisherman and I enjoyed the view of the Lake and the mountains, more than I did the fishing.

Returning to the bridge, we found

HOW MASSACHUSETTS IS GOVERNED

The 3rd article in a series on state departments written by Representative J. C. Brimblecom

One of the interesting departments of the office of the state secretary is the archives division, for it contains so many documents relating to the history of the Colony and of the State. Massachusetts made an early start in the work of caring for its records, after the House of Representatives in 1821, over a hundred years ago, had instructed the then secretary to make a report on the present condition of the public records. The first addition to the Bulfinch State house was in 1831 for the purpose of constructing a place for the safe keeping of the public records.

At present there are some 200,000 papers relating to legislation from 1625 to 1780 and at least a million papers from 1780 to date. There are 5,000 maps and plans from 1630 to date many of which are unique. Newton residents will be interested in a plan of a tract of land adjoining Athol and Petersham granted to Newton in 1734 and in another plan of a tract of land near Berwick, Me. granted to Newton for the support of the Charles river bridge in 1735. There is also a plan of the Charles River made in 1791, by Jonathan Kingsbury in 1794-5 and a plan of the town made in 1831 by E. F. Woodward and W. F. Ward. There are General Court records from 1628 to date, the engrossed acts from 1692 and House 1730 and Senate Journals from 1730.

The charters of Massachusetts are most valuable documents and include those of 1628 and 1691 with the explanatory charter of 1720 and the explanation vacating that of 1628. They are kept in steel asbestos lined cases, in a handsome steel chest in the private office of the secretary. The archives also contain the constitutions of Massachusetts, the military records of the Indian wars, and such subjects as Eastern Indians, Western Indians, slaves, captives, shipping and piracy, physic and surgery, wills and inventories, proclamations, Baptists, Quakers, witches, Shay's rebellion, etc., etc.

One interesting document is that of "The Great Census" of Roger Williams banishment dated at Salem, in 1639 and another order of 1656 allowing a temporary suspension of Williams banishment and in 1676 an order for conditional suspension of the same banishment. A curious document dated 1670 is that of John Laurence, the executioner of Boston for an increase in his wages of fifteen pounds a year. Sarah Kidd, the wife of Captain Kidd makes a petition in 1699 for the return of silver ware taken by the magistrates. There is also a letter from General Washington dated July 11, 1776, giving instructions for enlisting the Eastern Indians.

This office also has two photostat machines for the purpose of reproducing the old archives and maps and plans. These machines are also used to reproduce court records, legal papers of all kinds, records of soldiers, checks, finger prints, income tax returns and almost anything in the line of written and printed matter. The machine works rapidly, an exposure of only a few seconds to the light, with 40 seconds in the developer and a few seconds in the fixing bath, gives a negative and an exact copy of whatever is to be reproduced.

All in all the archives division is an interesting place to those who love to delve in the ways in which our ancestors lived and moved.

While it seems a far cry from the musty records of the archives division to the up to the minute work of the elections division, it is a good illustration of the range of work in the office of the state secretary.

Few people realize the immense amount of preliminary work necessary to enable the average voter to cast his or her ballot at the primary and state elections. The printing of the ballots alone is quite a task, taking about 27 or 28 tons of paper for the

1,500,000 ballots required for the coming primary. There are 11,307

different names on these ballots arranged in numerous combinations to cover the candidates for state wide offices, eight councilor, sixteen congressional, forty senatorial, one hundred and sixty five representative districts

besides the committees and state delegates for each ward and town in the entire state, each of the more than

1300 election precincts having its own particular set of ballots. Even before this mass of data is given the printer,

the secretary's office must receive the nomination papers bearing the names of all these candidates, must see that

PLAYGROUND FIELD DAY

800 Children Take Part in a Long Program of Athletic Events at Newton Centre

One of the most interesting and successful events of the summer was the annual field day and athletic meet of the Playground Department held Wednesday at the Newton Centre Playground. There was something doing from 9.30 in the morning when the children began to arrive from other parts of the city by truckloads, until 3.30 at night when the last event took place on the program of 51 different classes of athletics.

About 800 children were present from every playground in the city, and the Burr, Stearns, Boyd, Cabot, Horace Mann, Eden Ave., West Newton, Auburndale, Lower Falls, Upper Falls, Highlands, Waban, Newton Centre and Thompsonville playgrounds all had entries in the different events. About 3,000 spectators were present.

A most enjoyable and brilliant event was the folk dancing in the afternoon in which over 200 girls in costume took part. In this event first prize went to Ruth Turley and Helen Reay with Marion Shaughnessy and Frances Warner second.

A feature of the day was the high jumping of Barbara Phippen of West Newton, a ten-year-old girl, 3 feet, 10 inches high who jumped 4 feet 1 inch.

The first ball game for boys was won by the Cabot Park team. The Iron Quois tournament was won by John Lyman and Clarence Muse. The girls' first ball game was won by the Burr Playground team.

The city-wide championship was won by Boyd with a total of 68 points with West Newton second with 57½ points.

At 5.30 o'clock the children saluted the flag and there were remarks by Supt. Hermann of the Playground Department, and Mr. Charles F. Johnson of the Playground Commission, and by Mayor Childs who presented the prizes to the various winners.

Supt. Hermann was in charge of the meet assisted by A. S. Roberts, Hugh Boyd, A. T. Leary, F. Hiscoc and Hyman Schrier.

Coal Shortage

PERFECTION OIL HEATERS

As a result of the coal and railroad strikes, it is evident New England householders face a serious shortage of fuel during the coming winter. The gravity of the situation is not generally realized by the public.

Perfection Oil Heaters will be of the utmost help in overcoming the discomfort and inconveniences incident to this fuel shortage. We have ordered a large supply of heaters which we hope will take care of the demands of our customers.

It will be to your advantage, therefore, immediately to give most careful consideration to your heater requirements and place your order with us at once.

Immediate attention to this matter is essential for the supply of heaters will of necessity be limited—we do not want our customers to suffer this winter for lack of heat.

Looking In on Congress From the House Gallery

ABOUT THE MEMBERS

By CONGRESSMAN GUY U. HARDY

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.

A gentleman has raised the question of a quorum and the roll of the house of representatives is being called. Most members try to answer all roll calls, in order to maintain a quorum and vote on all measures possible.

Now the house is filling up, so we will look over the personnel of the body. The house, if all were present, would be composed of 435 members, with delegates from Alaska, Hawaii, the Philippine Islands and Porto Rico. These delegates do not vote.

I once heard ex-Speaker Clark in praising the house say it was the most democratic parliamentary body in the world. He didn't allude to politics. As I have met the members and have looked over the body of men I have often thought of that remark. As you now look down into the house with me I think you will realize, as I do, that this is a democratic body of men, representing, as it does, the whole of the great American Republic—the greatest republic in the history of the world. Almost every type and phase of American citizenship is represented there. It is a sort of high-class melting pot. Laborer and manufacturer; rich and poor; big brains and mediocre; wise, earnest men and near-chumps, all have seats. All classes of business and professions and all shades of political and religious beliefs are represented. Ex-governors, ex-senators, ex-judges, ex-presidents and ex-convicts have occupied seats. The blind and the halt are well represented. Only the deaf and dumb seem to be missing, though I am of the private opinion that it wouldn't jar the feelings of the house much if some members were so stricken.

After some years of observation from the inside, I can assure you that congress is made up of a fine lot of patriotic men.

Uncle Joe and Jim Mann.
Here is a good chance to look at some of the men as they walk in. You will recognize some of them from the pictures you have seen. Uncle Joe Cannon saunters in with the cocky air of youth, chewing the cigar cartoonists have made famous. If it is a cool day he may have his hat on. He was elected to congress first in 1872 and is now serving his twenty-third term. Only twice in all these years has he been defeated and he told the house one day that the years he was out were the longest years of his life. He is 86 years old and is young for that age. I have seen him dance at a dinner party, and I have heard that he plays a little poker now and then but never gets in over a dollar or two at a time. He takes a keen interest in important legislation, has a sane view of public affairs and makes a vigorous speech occasionally. Uncle Joe, as he is affectionately called, has declined to stand for reelection and will close his official career with the ending of this congress, after serving in the house of representatives longer than any other man.

I think I have already mentioned James R. Mann. There he is by the table. The two tables in the center of each side of the house are used by the leaders, by the chairman of the committee in charge of a bill and by others especially interested in the proceedings of the day. Mr. Mann belongs at the table on the Republican side. This is his thirteenth term in the house and he was long the Republican leader. He is not the Fourth of July style of orator but a most convincing speaker and the best posted man on pending legislation in the house. He is a terror to those who have private bills up on unanimous consent day. A bill must be innocent, indeed, or properly amended, before it gets through when he is present. I fancy that he has saved the government literally millions of dollars by his industry. In some ways he is the most valuable man in the house.

Two Party Leaders.
The other gentlemen by the table is Frank Mondell, the Republican leader at this time. He is serving his thirteenth term in the house—nearly 28 years of service—and he has been absent only four days, an unequal record, I think. Mr. Mondell is not a lawyer, but is an able and fearless leader, a keen thinker and strong debater. He was once a laborer and later a railroad contractor in Colorado, afterward going to Wyoming. He has a hard, nerve-wrecking job, but does it very well. When he makes a motion it usually carries. Mr. Mondell will not be in the house in the next congress, as he is a candidate for the United States senate.

The leader of the Democratic side is Claude Kitchin, but I cannot point him out to you, as he has been ill at home for about a year. He is a likable chap and was a man of great force in the house. His place is being filled by John N. Garner of Texas, and a worthy substitute he makes. He is serving his tenth term, and for 18 years he was a unique member of the house in that, during all of that time, he never let one of his speeches appear in the Congressional Record. Since assuming leadership and speaking for the party he lets his speeches go in. The gentleman by his side is Finis J. Garrett of Tennessee, who acts as assistant minority leader. Mr. Garrett is in his ninth term. He is a keen cutter, and can roast the Republicans and their measures in a more polished, clever and entertaining way than any other member on his side of the house.

Only Lady Representative.
Yes, the lady on the floor is a member. That is Miss Alice M. Robertson of Oklahoma, the only lady member and the second woman to be elected to congress. She was born in Oklahoma 66 years ago. Her father was a missionary to the Cherokees. Miss Alice has been teacher, a postmaster of a first-class office at Muskogee, and in recent years has conducted very successfully the largest cafeteria in Oklahoma. She is not what some are pleased to term themselves, a "new woman." She is a little old-fashioned in a way, for she stands by her convictions and is not easily influenced by organizations outside of her state. She was never a suffragist, and it may seem an irony of fate that the only woman in congress did not favor votes for women. Miss Alice is a popular member. She accepts things as they are, asks no favors on account of her sex and has more good horse sense and is less afraid to stand by her convictions than are most of her fellow members.

That old boy up in the press gallery is General Sherwood of Ohio. He was a member of the Sixty-sixth congress, but was retired by the landslide. General Sherwood was elected to congress as a Republican in 1872, the year Uncle Joe Cannon first came in. Then he came back in the Sixtieth congress as a Democrat and served 14 years. The general is eighty-seven years of age. When retired from congress he took up newspaper work, his former profession. When asked the other day if he would run again, he said: "No, I can't afford it. I have got to work now and lay up something for old age." But late newspaper reports indicate that he may have changed his mind.

Not the Place for Oratory.
Who are the orators of the house? Well, that is hard to say. You hear many speeches in the house, but little oratory. I know several gentlemen who are noted orators in their home states whom I have never heard make a speech in the house. Those who have been used to swaying the multitude with their oratory don't get very far with it in the house and soon become disappointed in their audience. I must say the house is not a very attentive listener. The members get fed up on speeches. They don't care for eloquence. What they want are facts. Order is not very good. Members come in and go out; they talk and read; they listen if something of interest is being said, but they are not sitting there for entertainment and flowery speeches do not draw large audiences here.

A speaker is often interrupted by questions. Any member may rise at any time and ask if the gentleman will yield for a question. The gentleman usually does yield, and he often gets his set speech badly punctured and comes out with a flat tire. Many members read their speeches. President Wilson and President Harding, when appearing before congress, have always read their speeches, and Secretary Hughes read his great speech at the opening of the limitation of arms conference, so it is not necessarily a sign of lack of ability for a man to read a speech, as it is often done to guarantee accuracy. However, we have plenty of orators for all occasions and can furnish the country with a good supply for the campaign.

Do the men in congress today rank up to those of the congresses of years ago? Well, yes; I think so. If you name your ideals of other days your list covers a hundred years. You are endeavoring to compare this one congress with fifty others. Of course, I do not care to back this congress against the whole of American history. The congress is not made up of experts or highbrows or bosses or supermen. We have no breed of ruling men in this country. It is made up of a pretty good average of the citizenship it represents—men who meet their folks back home on common ground and do not tower too high above them.

Superfluous.
Walter Camp, the famous athlete and trainer, was talking about rough football.

"One of the roughest players Yale ever turned out," he said, "went West to work on a ranch. The cowboys, having heard of his fame, asked him to teach them football."

"So the Yale man made up two husky eleven, explained the rules, and wound up with:

"Mind, men, if you can't kick the ball kick an opponent. Now let's get busy. Where's the ball?"

"Oh, drat the ball," said a cowboy; "let's get on with the game."

The number of child wards of Massachusetts is lower than it has been in many years, according to the annual report of the Department of Public Welfare, now on the press, to be published next month. The past two "dry" years have shown a marked decrease from the average number of delinquent, wayward, neglected and dependent children for whom the state had to care under the former "wet" conditions.

CHILDREN'S POETRY

The simple rhymes of childhood never lose their appeal. There is a fascination, probably due in a measure to the associations that cling to them, that cannot be entirely effaced. Henriette Willebeek Le Mair has charmingly illustrated some of the best known nursery rhymes. Her simplicity of color lends itself to the atmosphere of childhood that characterizes these verses. A splendid collection of her illustrated rhymes may be found in the entrance hall of the Newton Free Library.

Books showing her illustrations are also:
The children's corner; rhymes by R. H. Elkin (JYP-E43)
Our old nursery rhymes; the original tunes harmonized by Alfred Moffat (VZVB-M78)
Grannie's little rhyme book (JYPN-G76)

BARLEYCORN BELABORED BY BODY BLOWS

The Catholic Total Abstinence Union of Illinois, at its fifty-third convention held recently in Chicago, adopted unanimous resolutions condemning the sale of liquor on board American ships.

The resolution, a copy of which, according to the Chicago Tribune, was forwarded to President Harding, follows:

"The Catholic Total Abstinence Union of Illinois is unalterably opposed to the sale of intoxicating liquor on American ships, whether anchored in American ports or sailing on the high seas thousands of miles from American land."

"We believe the American flag, now the glorious emblem of sobriety and righteousness throughout the civilized world, should not be polluted nor degraded because certain interests see an imaginary mercenary advantage in suggesting to the United States shipping board the fallacious argument that it is necessary to sell intoxicating liquors on American ships in order to compete successfully with ships flying foreign flags."

"We deny that the great majority of American business men and American travelers would fail to patronize American ships flying their own beloved Stars and Stripes simply because they carried on board no intoxicating liquors in compliance with the laws of their native land."

Knew Him.

A promoter arrived at the gates of heaven. St. Peter, as usual, was on the watch. "Will you kindly step into the lift?" said he. The company promoter did as he was told, but was kept waiting a long time. At last he grew impatient. "Will you kindly tell me when the lift goes up?" "It does not go up," was the reply; "It goes down."—York (England) Post.

WHO ARE "THE INTERESTS"?

Rabid politicians and editors of yellow newspapers used to rave about "the interests" behind utility corporations. There had been plenty of selfish exploitation of public service franchises to provide material for campaign issues and political propaganda in many cities. But the cart-tail spell-binder and the men who plied the poison pens adopted it as universal gospel, good for any town and any time.

Out of the smoke and fire of all this spectacular headline and platform accusation came a general popular belief that utilities were owned by "interests." "Interests" were supposed to be groups of rich, greedy and dishonest men, banded together to rob communities by overcharging them for electric light or gas, or water or street-car rides. These rich men kept hidden out of sight and therefore were despicable.

The reason sensible grown up men and women swallowed all of this was because so many people said it so continuously in so many cities and because in some places it was proved to be true. And all the time the utilities in their towns did not prove to them that it was false. So, not knowing who did own their utilities, and not being told, they believed that there were hidden owners, that there must be a reason why they hid, and that the reason must be the same as in the other crooked cases.

So the politicians reared and pitched for personal reasons and the sensation editors wrote on and on. And the people kept wondering who was who did own the utilities. The utility executives for some mysterious reason elected to sit still and suffer silently, when all that they had to do was to publish their stockholders' names to prove that as a matter of fact the people owned the utilities themselves. If they had done this—if they would do it now—there would never be a word about "interests." For everybody knows that "we, the people"—all of us neighbors—are honest and never steal pennies from any one.

It is the duty of every man in any branch of the electrical industry to spread confidence, a clear understanding of who it is who actually owns the electrical utilities—and as a matter of fact all other large modern business enterprises as well. We own them, of course—we, the people—only we are allowed to forget. But the more electrical men talk about it, the less the politician can hinder and the more the people will buy utility securities. And the more there are who are stockholders, the fewer there can be who will misunderstand.

Out of this understanding naturally will come more confidence, interest and enthusiasm for electrical appliances. And that, above all things, will promote the electrical industry.

WHAT THE COUNTRY NEEDS

What this country needs is not a new birth of freedom but the old-fashioned two-dollar lower berth.

What this country needs isn't more liberty but less people who take liberties with our liberty.

What this country needs is not a job for every man but a real man for every job.

What this country needs isn't to get more taxes from the people but for the people to get more from the taxes.

What the country needs is not more miles of territory but more miles to the gallon.

What this country needs is more tractors and less detractors.

What this country needs isn't more young men making speed but more young men planting speeds.

What this country needs is more paint on the old place and less paint on the young face.

What this country needs isn't a lower rate on money but a higher interest in work.

What this country needs is to follow the footsteps of the fathers instead of the footsteps of the dancing master.

EDITORIAL

We hope that the voters of Newton will realize the necessity of arranging their personal affairs so they may cast their ballots at the state primary on September 12th. We have just learned of one good citizen who, after planning to leave the city for the month of September, has now arranged to stay here until the morning of the primary in order to cast his vote. With the large Republican majority in this district, the nomination of that party, as made at the primary, is virtually the election and should be regarded as such by every citizen.

With the great importance attached to the vote at the coming State primary on September 12, due to the fact that the Republican nomination in most cases is equivalent to an election, it is the duty of every man and woman to see that their names are on the voting lists and especially to urge any newcomers in their neighborhood to register before next Saturday.

Newton has never looked more lovely than it has this summer. The frequent rains have kept the grass and shrubs in excellent condition and the lawns and flowers have been most attractive.

AGAINST LAND SEIZURE

Editor of the Graphic:—

May I express my commendation of your editorial protest against the taking by the city of land merely to enhance the aesthetic value of the new Underwood School site?

Your argument that it is an unnecessary expenditure of the taxpayers' money appeals to me as no doubt it does to others who have to foot the bills.

Another point that has occurred to me is the housing situation, which still remains tense and is likely to for some time. Because of that fact I believe the city should hesitate before destroying tenable property to provide ornamental school grounds, especially in a thickly settled district.

A Taxpayer.

Your Gas Company and the Coal Shortage

WE are prepared to give every possible assistance to avert suffering from lack of heat due to the coal shortage.

It is evident from facts now before us that heat from fuel other than coal will be needed. Gas is the ideal fuel for supplemental heat and those residing where it is available are fortunate.

However, we wish to sound a timely warning to all gas users; Do not postpone purchasing new gas equipment, or notifying us about putting your present appliances into first-class condition. Later we will probably be rushed with orders, at which time it will be impossible to give prompt service to all customers.

Call at the office or telephone your request for an inspector to call and look over your equipment and tell you what is needed to put it into good shape and make suggestions for new appliances.

WHERE THE WEST BEGINS

Mr. Albright waiting with his machine and continued on our way to the Canyon hotel. Our first stop was at the Mud volcano, a boiling, and writhing mass of mud, about 25 feet in diameter and which had a sinister look as well as a disagreeable smell. It was not a pretty thing to look at and we made a brief visit. A short distance away was the "Dragon's mouth"—a most appropriate name,—for here in an opening in the rock, shaped like a half oval, and about 6 feet long, was a constant coughing and spitting out of jets of hot water and steam, giving the impression that there was some diabolical animal concealed and lying in wait for its prey. Scattered all around in this vicinity were little holes in the clay ground called "paint pots." They were a few inches in diameter and in which the mud was boiling and bubbling as if over a furnace. The ground was evidently filled with tiny outlets for the heat below for, wherever the water flowed over the ground these little bubbles were constantly forming. As we went on a little farther we met two bears on the roadside and Mr. Albright stopped the car and one of them came boldly up to the machine and took a stick of chewing gum from one of our party. The other bear was a trifle surly and refused to leave the shelter of the shrubs on the road.

Hayden's Valley, the heart of the Yellowstone is a charming spot, miles in extent and in the meadows of which were many tracks of elk and deer.

At each of the scenic points in the Park, there are splendid and modern hotels and, for those who wish it, a system of camps. At the Grand Canyon, the camps are on the east side and the hotel on the west side, but at the other points, the hotels and camps are fairly close to each other. All along the road, which follows the Yellowstone river we saw many fishermen, usually with an automobile parked in the vicinity. We crossed the river on a fine bridge and went into the Canyon camps to show our fish and to leave a few for some of our party who were to stop there. As we went along further, Mr. Albright suggested that we had better close our eyes until he told us to open them. We were well repaid for when we got the word we had stopped at Artists' Point and were looking down into the famous Yellowstone canyon, with a view of the Lower Falls of the River at one end of the picture. The canyon is about 1200 feet deep and some 2,000 feet across from rim to rim. There is absolutely no use in trying to describe it,—it must be seen to be appreciated. I have been reading, since I returned, from the diary of a member of the first party to explore the Yellowstone in 1870. In it he says, "Standing there or rather lying there utterly impossible it would be to describe to another the sensations inspired by such a presence. As I took in the scene I realized my own littleness, my helplessness, my dread exposure to destruction, my inability to cope with or even comprehend the mighty architecture of nature." He also comments on the silence of the place—the dashing river, so far below that it could not be even heard.

Sometime later, we paid a closer visit to the two falls of the Yellowstone river. On the hotel side of the canyon, several flights of steps lead down to the Lower Falls. Someone said there were 641 steps, and if they had said 1,000 I would still have believed, for it is certainly a long way down from the road, and when you arrive at the bottom, you are still at the brink of the falls, which drop over 300 feet right below you. As a matter of fact, this view of the falls isn't worth the effort, and it is a long hard climb up those 641—or is it 1,000 steps,—and an effort which in that altitude makes it necessary to frequently stop for a breathing spell.

Altogether different is a similar trip to the Upper Falls, a short distance up stream from the other. Here there are far less steps and they land you at a point facing the falls, about 25 feet away from them and about 25 or 30 feet below the brink, so that you have a wonderful view of the cataract, which has a drop of over 100 feet at this point.

The less said about our dinner that night at the Canyon Hotel the better. It was the only cause of dissatisfaction we encountered in our whole visit and was due to the fact that the management attempted to care for several hundred more guests than the facilities would allow.

Incidentally I had other troubles of my own for Mr. Albright insisted that I must take part in the celebration the next day of the semi-centennial of the opening of the Park, which he had planned to have taken place while our Association was in the Park.

HOW MASS. IS GOVERNED

The names are properly certified by the local boards of registrars of voters and that each candidate has the requisite number of names to qualify under the election laws. This in itself is an enormous task and keeps a score of clerks busy for several weeks.

When printed the ballots are wrapped in separate bundles for each precinct, packed in wooden boxes and expressed to the 355 city and town clerks throughout the Commonwealth.

The regular election in November of course requires less detail than the primary so far as the nomination of candidates is concerned, but the same care is necessary in regard to the printing and distribution of the ballots.

It is interesting to note at this point that the secretary's office has never failed to deliver the ballots to each city and town in time for the election.

Possibly the narrowest margin in this respect was a few years ago when the office was notified at 9 P. M. on the day before election, that a town in Worcester County had not received its quota of ballots. The state printer was aroused, a new set of ballots printed and at 2 A. M. they were started on their way by automobile, arriving five minutes before the polls opened that morning at 5:45 o'clock.

There has also never been any irregularity or errors on the ballots. The office is justly proud of its record of these important matters.

The expense of the primary is estimated at $73,500 and the election at $55,000.

Another duty placed on the office of the secretary by the recent Initiative and Referendum amendment to the constitution, is that of sending to each voter in the state, a pamphlet of information on any question which may be on the ballot for acceptance or rejection by the people. This year there will be at least five such referendums and there is a possibility of others receiving enough signatures to be also placed on the ballot. This little detail involves the addressing and mailing of these pamphlets to each of 1,500,000 voters at a cost of $40,000.

The referendums this year will be a proposed amendment to the state constitution to relieve the General Court of numerous roll calls on important matters; and the acceptance or rejection of these acts of the Legislature,—the censorship of moving pictures, requiring district attorneys to be members of the bar, harmonizing the state laws with the Volstead act, and allowing voluntary corporations to sue and be sued.

The acts establishing a Department of Administration and Finance and relative to membership in the Industrial Accident Board may also appear on the ballot provided the necessary signatures are obtained in time.

Correction—My attention has been called to an inadvertent error in the first article where it was stated that the Governor had ten days in which to approve or veto a bill passed by the legislature. The time limit is five days, not ten.

THE LEGION WINS

Before a crowd of more than 5,000, the Newton Legion nine defeated the warriors of the House of David, last Friday at Claffin Field, Newtonville, by a score of 4 to 3. By agreement the game was called at the end of the eighth inning. The bearded ball tossers were leading up to the last half of the eighth, 3 to 2. Kelly hit safely and stole second. Gilbert passed J. L. Leary and took a chance on Hunt. With the count two all on Hunt and two down, Gilbert cut the plate and Hunt poled it into left field for three bases, scoring Kelly and Leary and winning the game.

POLICE NOTES

Edward F. Leary of 80 Gardner street, Newton, was arraigned in the District Court last week Friday morning before Judge Allen, charged with drunkenness and operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. Leary was arrested on Saturday night, Aug. 12, shortly after 9:30 following a collision between his light touring car and a Newton bound Middlesex & Boston electric car. Patrolman Taffe, who arrested Leary, testified that the defendant was in a dazed condition and that his breath smelled strongly of liquor. Patrolman Keating took Leary's car to a garage, as he said Leary was in no condition to drive. Judge Allen found him guilty and imposed a fine of $100 and a suspended sentence of six months in the House of Correction. Leary appealed the case and Judge Allen revoked a suspended sentence of three months imposed a short time ago on Leary. Leary withdrew his appeal and took the original sentence. The charge of drunkenness was placed on file.

A touring car owned by David F. Howe of 7 Allison street, Newton, was found abandoned Sunday evening in the driveway of the Edward Russell farm, Winchester. The machine was taken by four men for a joy ride from Newton and was apparently abandoned on Cambridge street because of lack of gasoline to run it. The owner of the auto, Mr. Howe, was notified by the Newton police on the request of the local police. He came to Winchester and took his auto back to Newton Monday morning.

Salvatore Scholdemalya, 47 of 21 Harvey place, West Newton, was arrested Sunday night by Patrolmen Gaquin and Hayden, charged with the sale of intoxicating liquor. He was arraigned on that charge the next morning in the Newton District Court before Judge Bacon. The defendant pleaded guilty. Patrolman Gaquin testified that he witnessed the sale of a pint of alleged whiskey to an employee of a local garage. Two dollars was paid to Scholdemalya, and when he was searched at the station house the money was found in his pocket. Scholdemalya was fined $100 and given time to pay.

POST OFFICE TO BE MOVED

Supt. M. John Barry of the Newton Centre Post Office has received word from the Post Office Department at Washington that the bid submitted by Robert A. Vachon, owner of Circuit Block, Langley road, for the Post Office quarters, has been accepted.

On the lease on the present quarters at the corner of Centre and Pleasant street expires, the Post Office will remove to the Circuit Block and will occupy the corner where the Foreman Electric Company is now located. The new Postoffice will afford 500 square feet more of street space than the present quarters provide and 300 square feet more of cellar space. The location on Centre street is a quarter of a mile from the railroad station, while the new location is within 400 feet of the station. For the past five years the present quarters have been inadequate, in such times as the Christmas rush it being almost impossible to give prompt service. A short time ago the quarters were enlarged by taking half of the adjoining store, but this, too, was outgrown, and it was necessary to seek a new and larger building.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, John Richardson. The maid of honor was Miss Susan M. Lee of Boston. The bridesmaids were Miss Amy Lee, sister of the maid of honor; Miss Katherine Thompson, Miss Mary L. Barton, all of Boston, and Miss Sylvia P. Benson of Salem. The flower girls were the Misses Hope, Louisa and Hetty Richardson, all of Readville. The best man was Dr. Edward P. Richardson of Brookline, brother of the groom.

A reception at the summer home of the bride's mother at Lothrop's Point, Cohasset, followed the ceremony. After a trip the couple will live at 60 West Cedar street, Boston.

TRADE WITH THE FAR EAST

Writer Points Out How It May Be Developed Almost Beyond the Imagination.

Some people say the Chinese are so poor that it will be difficult to increase their trade with us, writes Robert Dollar in the Nation's Business. I say that opportunities in China are greater than in any other country, and I will illustrate how this trade can be enlarged with a conversation I once had with a Chinese on a street in his native city. I said to him:

"We are going to increase trade here by increasing the purchasing power of the people."

"But," said he, "it cannot be done."

At that moment a wagon load of lumber from my lumber yard came along; it was being pulled by thirteen men. It was in the winter and snow lay on the ground, but those men were all barefooted. I was paying them eight cents a day. I said:

"You take those thirteen men off that wagon, put a horse there with one man to drive and put the other twelve men into a factory and you will increase their purchasing power. They will buy more and develop the commerce of your country."

I asked him how many persons in China were going barefooted, and he replied that there must be 100,000,000 anyway, if not more. I told him that they were going barefooted from necessity and not from choice and that if they could earn more they would not go barefooted. Each one of them wanted to buy a pair of shoes and stockings. Maybe a shoe manufacturer will read this. What would it mean to him to supply 100,000,000 people?

And bear in mind that shoes are not the only necessities that these 100,000,000 people are doing without for the simple reason that they have been too poor to buy.

ORIGIN OF COATS OF ARMS

Employed as Method of Recognition in Days When Learning Was in Its Infancy.

Almost every name of European origin, which has been passed down for the centuries unchanged, except for a slight alteration in its spelling, had in the earliest time, before surnames were used, and when language was undeveloped and few could read or write, a totem or seal, which represented it.

The totem was used as a seal. All persons of property had a seal, and when knighthood was introduced in feudal times, after the Roman era, the device of the seal was painted on the knight's shield, and he was known thereby when the helmet was closed in warfare or in tournaments. The earliest knights had no crest. Later, when the knights in a family multiplied, crests on the top of the helmets were adopted to distinguish those who bore similar arms on their shields. Crests represented the Christian name, the arms the surname. The arms were often printed or embroidered on the knight's mantle and horse blanket, and hence was termed "coat of arms."

Odd African Bush Tribe.

The strangest people in the world, according to Mrs. Harry Kaigh Eustace, who is here on her way to England and Africa, are the women of a bush tribe in the Gordonia desert, central southwest Africa.

These women, she says, have developed glands in the back in which they store water, like camels. When they drink a great deal of water, the glands make them appear deformed. After a few days in the desert, with little or no water, their reserve supply is absorbed and they look normal. They can go without water longer than a camel.

Mrs. Eustace, whose husband is a big game hunter, is English, and has spent 12 years in Africa shooting big game with camera and gun. She is preparing for her ninth expedition, and is in New York after a visit to San Francisco.

She says snakes are really affectionate when you get to understand them, and make good pets.

Home Hunters Take All Except Ghost.

It was a haunted house in a gossip neighborhood, relates the New York Herald. Residents assembled daily and talked in muffled tones of spirits and queer noises. With such advance advertising the real estate agent found it difficult to get a "prospect" near the house. As a last resort he decided to have the place redecorated and to install new electric fixtures and plumbing.

The work had scarcely been completed when the agent heard a "live one" had visited the property. Rushing off to the caretaker he inquired breathlessly: "Is it true that someone has taken the house?"

"No, sir, not yet," replied the caretaker, "but they've taken the fixtures, piping and doorknobs. Perhaps they'll come back for the house."

The Last Resort.

In answer to the returned summer visitor's questions as to the welfare of Mr. Padgett and his whereabouts, Mr. Dorkin replied that "Jake" was teaching at the little red schoolhouse on Harley's hill.

"But I thought—" "Well, he is," admitted Mr. Dorkin, understandingly, "an' he gets more 'n' more muddled all the time. But what else could we do? We had to put him in as schoolmaster to keep him off the town."

"We ain't goin' to pauperize a man," he added, loftily, "if we can find anything for him to do."—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

THE EUSTIS MEMORIAL

EUSTIS, Me., Aug. 5.—One hundred and one years ago a young man who had not then reached his majority, lived with and operated a large farm for his widowed mother in Dixfield, Maine. The family had moved a few years before this from Rutland, Mass., his birthplace. A weekly or bi-monthly newspaper gave him the intelligence that the State of Massachusetts would soon sell at public auction wild timberlands, in the Province of Maine, in the Dead River section.

Former information which he had picked up was revived in his memory and he determined to investigate. He promptly journeyed on foot to the last outpost of civilization, in or near Kingfield. There he secured an Indian guide, who claimed to know Arnold's route to Quebec. After one day's travel the guide fell behind and was seen no more. The sturdy young traveler ascended the Jerusalem stairs on Mt. Abraham and later climbed Mt. Bigelow. From this vantage point his view of the Dead River valley enabled him to pick out the big timber near the river. Being somewhat of a surveyor and accustomed to traveling and plotting by the compass, he got bearings of the land he wanted to possess.

He returned to Dixfield, sold a pair of steers and bought a horse. His mother owned a fine old chaise.

The horse and chaise, with the mother and young pioneer son, drove from Dixfield to Taunton, Mass. Uncles and cousins lived there, and he interested one of them to go to the auction and bid in for him (he being a minor) the territory now known by its original name as Eustis township.

The initial payment of some three hundred dollars he had got together by the sale of some farm stock, by pledges and by borrowing. The succeeding payments were made from the proceeds of his lumbering operations.

This young man, Charles Lyman Eustis, was born in Rutland, Mass., in 1802, the pioneer lumberman of the Dead River and the first white man to go through this part of the Country after General Arnold's march toward Quebec. Desiring to perpetuate the memory of this sterling pioneer, his oldest grandson, now a man past the noonday of life, John P. Eustis of Cambridge and Newton, Mass., has erected a memorial in the Cathedral Pines in Eustis, a natural, irregular prism, weighing some six or seven tons, cut from an outcropping ledge some four or five miles away, hauled to the pines and erected on a concrete base.

On this natural shaped monument, some eight feet high, is fixed a life-size bas-relief likeness in bronze of the pioneer. It was modeled from a daguerreotype taken when he was about forty years of age. The bronze also shows appropriate words and dates. Discerning people who have seen this impressive memorial are unanimous in praise of it from an artistic point of view, and all who have seen the picture from which the bas-relief was modeled express wonder and delight for the perfect likeness attained by the noted sculptor, F. W. Allen of Boston.

It is interesting to know that George Barker Eustis of Minneapolis, Minn., the last surviving son of Charles Lyman Eustis, arrived here a few days ago to view the memorial. He is visiting his nephew, J. P. Eustis, at The Birches, in Eustis.

THE DEVIL'S TOWER

THIS peculiar freak of nature which has become one of Uncle Sam's National Monuments, is located near Sundance in northeastern Wyoming. It is a gigantic rock, 600 feet high, probably 60 feet in diameter at the top and a mile around at the base. Rising sheer from the level plain, it is visible in some directions for almost a hundred miles.

Undoubtedly this tower was useful to primitive races as well as to early pioneers as a landmark. 'Tis thought that during the subsequent Indian wars members of the Sioux and Crow tribes directed their marches by the aid of fires and other signals flashed from this ever-visible tower.

As one approaches this monstrous rock, his amazement and awe increases, because it seems incredible that any force of Nature could have carved this solitary monument.

To climb to the top would seem an impossibility, yet it is said that a number of years ago a man and a woman accomplished this feat successfully.

Now that the war is behind us and Uncle Sam has more time to devote to home matters, it seems not unlikely that he may deem it advisable to send an expedition to the top of his new possession and cause a series of stairways to be constructed for the accommodation and convenience of venturesome tourists bent on getting acquainted with their own country.

AN APPEAL TO REASON!

There has been so much discussion during the past week concerning a possible pollution of Newton's drinking water from the Charles River at the Charlemont Section of Newton that a few facts should be thoroughly understood before something is "put over."

Charlemont, formerly the Old Goddard Estate on Winchester Street, has 105 acres—The Charles River Country Club purchased 25 acres leaving 80 acres at present being developed. A part of the latter acreage (about 7 acres) borders on the Charles River about 1,000 feet south from the pumping station on easterly side of the river.

A glance at the City Engineer's plan of the water supply lay out shows that the artesian wells which supply the city's drinking water are about two miles up the river from this point and that the conduit running parallel to the river is on high land 100 or more feet from westerly side of the river and is so far removed from the river that there can be no possible seepage from the river. It has heretofore been the open boast of the Water Department that the artesian wells catch the water before it reaches the Charles River, and there can be no possible seepage from the river. Why now the chameleon change of attitude?

The Charles River is dark red, full of minute vegetable and organic life and nauseous to the taste, unfit to drink unless boiled. To provide against any possible seepage there is a 24-inch pipe, 2 inches thick, which carries the water across the river from the conduit, 3 to 6 feet, underneath the bed of the river to the pumping station at a point over 500 feet below the land under discussion. Over this pipe is the only possible argument. At a recent hearing at the State House the City's representatives, after getting tied up in a hazy tangle in seepage go up stream and water running up a bank, with dying hope strenuously clung to the idea that this 2-inch thick pipe MIGHT break. If we can believe them, then the whole water system of Newton stands condemned.

Why the night mare? Why the garbled distortion? The River MIGHT pollute if a 24-inch iron pipe, 2 inches or more in thickness MIGHT break. IT NEVER HAS, and the nearest to it, has been the loosening of a screw cap once in 45 years.

Surely the land under discussion cannot pollute. We have no cesspools. There are 200 feet deep from the river, other sanitary approved methods are in use, we take pride in keeping the water front clean.

If any heretofore or hereafter applied for cesspools they can be refused the right legally by the City. Why the threat to prospective builders? Why the withholding of building permits? Why the scornful reference to camps, etc.? Why the failure to supply water until 23 people came before the Board of Aldermen and stated that they were ready to build permanent homes on land other than the 7 acres in dispute at Charlemont? We are still waiting while all available pipe is being used on other jobs. We will get the pipes in time, but the 23 prospective home builders are getting worried and anxiously ask if they are going to be permitted to build this year. Why was this discussion started after the Charles River Country Club purchased? Why is their land immune and we told that ours must be taken? Why was the NEWS brought to us by them? Surely there is a "nigger" in the pile somewhere, and it behooves a few private citizens to investigate a matter which the Board refused last year to entertain.

Our side of the River is clean, and we intend to keep it clean, but an examination recently made in an opening in the wooden conduit, on the other side by a citizen of Newton, disclosed some dead rats, a fact which called for speedy work at the pumping station. We understand that this is not unusual and not infrequently dead snakes and other small animals find their way into said open wooden conduit. To remove the watery beast from their own eyes before looking for a possible moat in the other fellows.

Charlemont is restricted to the building of homes at a minimum cost of at least $3,000.00, with the exception that near the river, bungalows or camps may be erected to be regularly habited only from April 1, to Oct. 31. The average sale has been over 100-foot frontage. 279 lots have been sold to 114 people, of whom 34 are citizens of Newton.

Our street plans, grades and profiles were approved by City Engineer over two years ago. Roads have been built to said grades. Our land has a high elevation, 103 to 155 feet above the city base. We shall make this section an agreeable residential community in spite of opposition and in spite of the many obstacles placed in our way.

We have cleared Cold Spring Grove of "picnickers," "crap shooters," etc., who were a real menace in the past, cleaned up the shore and erected attractive neat cottages.

Mr. Taxpayer see it for yourself and judge for yourself whether the hypothesis of unknown and unexplained pollution going up stream, or across running water up a bank and through gravel into a conduit 400 feet away, or through two inches of iron piping, 3 to 6 feet under the river bed was not created by the recent heat wave, and ask why certain officials do not like us to query them concerning the possible connection with a sewer system that is but 1200 feet away, but don't forget that "There's nane sa blind as those who dinna want to see."

PRICE TO BE REDUCED

President Charles L. Edgar of The Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston announces another reduction in the Company's popular rate from 10 cents to 9½ cents per kilowatt hour in effect on meter readings after Aug. 31. In calling attention to this cut for the Schedule "A" customers, President Edgar said:

"When we discontinued the coal clause and 5% increase on this class of business on March 1 last I anticipated a continuance of business revival, and advertised the hope and expectation of the company to make the reduction now announced.

"Business is increasing everywhere in a healthy way, homes are building, old houses are being renovated or remodeled and such improvements mean more users of electric service. Cost of wiring for electric service, fixtures, etc., are approaching pre-war basis and the Edison Company strives to facilitate in every way the use of its service in the home when its convenience and economy mean so much.

"Schedule 'A' customers number approximately 136,000 (88%) of the 153,000 users of Edison service—they are the owners or occupants of residences, apartments, small stores and shops. They afford 42% of the Company's income for electricity sold. Continued improvement in business conditions with consequent increase in the Edison Company's income will, I am sure, bring added developments in Edison service and steady lowering of rates."

NORUMBEGA PARK

A list of entries that assures the success of the project has already been received by L. M. Rich and his assistants for the Baby Show and Carnival to be held at Norumbega Park on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of next week. Prof. Rich has devoted a life time to the babies and his successful handling of the baby show at the last Home Beautiful Exposition made it one of the outstanding features of that exhibit.

The Norumbega Park carnival will consist of three contests, of which the competitive baby show and the parade of decorated baby coaches will be held on the first day, while on the second day there will be a schoolgirls' white dress raffle. The crowning of the King and Queen of Babyland will also be a feature.

Entry blanks are free and may be secured at any drug or grocery store in Newton, as well as at the information booth at the park. The list of prizes is most attractive. The mother whose baby is adjudged the most handsome will receive a White sewing machine. There are also silver sets, table silver, gold necklaces and other valuable trophies, while many dolls and toys will also be given away as premiums.

There will be prizes for the fattest and the smallest babies, the most strenuous, the best all-around baby, twins and in fact, for every variety of baby. The management will transport carriages free to the park and return them free after the carnival.

MR. DOUBLEDAY LEAVES LOCAL Y. M. C. A.

Mr. F. E. Doubleday, who has been connected with the Newton Y. M. C. A. in Physical and Boys' Work for the past six years, is leaving Newton to enter some other line of endeavor. During his stay here he carried on a most successful piece of work among the men and boys of the Community. By his winning personality and unselfish service he made scores of friends who will feel his leaving a real personal loss. The Newton Association accepted with regret his resignation.

As a token of the appreciation of the Y. M. C. A. an informal Farewell was extended him last Saturday night at which time the Directors, members, and friends presented Mr. Doubleday with a generous purse of gold. Mr. Chase Kepner made the presentation previous to which he delivered a very appropriate speech.

Mr. Doubleday was taken completely by surprise and responded with a spontaneous speech right from his heart. Everyone present extended a glad hand and wished him well for the future. He is to remain in the city until after Labor Day after which he will return to his home in Washington, Pa.

AN EVENING RIDE

A very pleasant evening drive, occupying about one and a half hours, may be taken as follows:—
Starting from the Auburndale station as before, we do not forget to notice what a pleasant building this is. It was one of the first designed by H. H. Richardson for the B. & A. R. R. and attracted much attention when it was first built being an entirely new conception of a railroad waiting place. It was a great departure for the railroad, and one that has been widely imitated. Near the station is Nye Park, named for the Nye family who lived near here and gave a part of the land for a park. This Park has been very conveniently arranged to assist people to reach trains, and here stands the temporary tablet erected to the world war soldiers.

At the right of the station on the corner of Hancock Street is the Walcott Burr Park, given to the city by Miss Lucia Burr in memory of her father and mother. This park is little used, as seats are hidden in the shrubbery, and it is not known by the newer residents that this is also a park. It is the scene of the community Christmas Tree.

Opposite the station is the W. H. Smith estate a handsome stone house which is about to be removed, and a new street is to be run through these grounds and named Crescent Terrace; many new houses are to be built here in the near future.

After admiring the handsome landscape gardening we will drive around two corners on Grove Street and over the Railroad bridge into Auburndale.

We will not look on the right as we cross the bridge, for that is not one of the Beauty spots, but passing the Post Office we turn into Ash street just at the corner of Melrose and here we find the new Mens Club House which is being remodelled and promises to become a credit to the village.

On Ash street, we pass the handsome C. C. Burr School, and on the right the site of the new Church which the Roman Catholic Society is preparing to erect here. Also the Hildreth house which they have already purchased. Here we enter Commonwealth Avenue, which takes a handsome curve, and sweeps around to Norumbega Park. It is pleasant to branch off on the right and take a little side tour to Islington Road where are many pretty villas and where are the former elegant residences of the late R. M. Pulsifer, H. W. Thorndike, Mr. Benyon, Mr. Hale, Mr. Ryder, Mr. Whiting and others. There are many fine views of the river all around here and it is not strange that this is a favorite residence section. The people in Auburndale usually designate this section as Over's Islington, while the Islington people speak of "The Village" as around the Post Office.

Returning to the Boulevard as Commonwealth Avenue is usually called, we come to Norumbega Park, which is too well known to need description. The several boat houses near are well known and very accessible and near by is the Life Saving Station of the Metropolitan Park. Many are the lives saved here. The station is very completely fitted up with all sorts of appliances for life saving. There is always a matron on duty and boats are ready at all times. Besides this men are always patrolling the river in boats and on shore. And here we come to the Weston Bridge. This has just recently been rebuilt, but it is ready to go. To accommodate all the traffic it might easily be three times as wide, but this one is a great improvement on the old one, which was built part of stone (on the Newton side) and part of wood (on the Weston side.) The view up and down the river is fine, and of a holiday afternoon is very gay with crowds of canoes of all sizes and colors. We cross the bridge and take the first turn to the right, a private road owned by the Metropolitan Park and closed during the winter months. Soon we come to Norumbega Tower, which is a most interesting place connected with the history of the early Norsemen. It was built by Prof. Horsford at his own expense and is intended to call attention to remains of the Norsemen, old walls, etc., which were found here. A pretty view is obtained from the top of this Tower. Passing on we soon come to the Cambridge Water Works Reservoir, and it is worth while to descend from the car and walk over the foot bridge to see the falls and the beautiful sheet of water in its quiet surroundings.

Continuing on this road towards the northwest for about 3 or 4 miles we come to Weston. On the right as we enter Weston is the beautiful Sears estate with its handsome Italian terrace, and entering the square at Weston is the fine "Old English" Unitarian Church and on the left the Public Library which is one of the most complete in this part of the country. In this Library may be seen many old relics of early days, with autograph letters of great value to the historian. Across from the Library is the handsome and really beautiful Town Hall, in its sunken gardens, a large brick and stone building well placed, well built and well arranged.

In Weston we find no electric cars, and the railroad station is quite hidden away, and we are glad it is so. It makes us grateful to the early fathers of the town who fought the coming of the railroad to Worcester, so that it was laid out through Newton instead. It was a great thing for Newton but it kept Weston for us to enjoy just as it used to be, a beautiful open country, just right for automobile. Taking the left hand road we may drive as far as we will on good roads with plenty of company in both directions.

There are Inns and Tea Rooms all along. Nobscot Mountain is off on the left, and The Wayside Inn, is a good place to stop and rest, and study Colonial history. There is a wonderful collection here made by Mr. Lemon, and everyone in Massachusetts should be familiar with this place. This was a stopping place for the stage coaches which ran through here until quite recent times from Worcester to Boston.

Turning towards home we shall find a number of places along the way where the farmers have fresh fruits and vegetables ready for us, and it is a lovely road all the way. We turn towards the right at Weston and a short distance down we turn again to the right and follow a country road through the woods. We come to Weston Water Works reservoir, and find it a secluded spot. If it is evening we may find many autos parked on the way, the occupants enjoying the beauties of these secluded spots, but with our glaring headlights made quite the contrary. Quite so! Soon we come to dwellings and farms and then to Wellesley Hills, and continuing on we reach Newton Lower Falls and farther on we meet the Boulevard and so on to Auburndale as given in another drive of this series.

The ride could be extended for 2 or 3 hours, or could be made shorter or cut into 2 or 3 drives by taking parts at a time.

GOOD ADVICE

In time of peace, it is well to prepare for war, and generally when proper preparation is made, war is avoided, and the same with the coal situation.

There are many devices now in use for heating and cooking purposes that are more economical than coal, and it is well to call the attention of our housekeepers to the more extended use of kerosene that might well be made at this time.

The supply of kerosene cooking stoves is normal, and can be obtained at a modest cost. Cooking by kerosene stove is cheaper than coal. It is more comfortable than coal during the mild days, because the heat can be turned off instantly when no longer needed and the kitchen kept cool. Hot water may be obtained for the household with a kerosene or gas stove and by a portable kerosene heater. It is cheap and handy, and can be moved from room to room during the chilly fall mornings. It will save you coal and money.

Now is the time to prepare for the fall and winter by buying both kerosene stoves and heaters, which can be obtained at any hardware or house furnishing store. Later, supplies may be lower than now, and prices higher. Gas stoves can also be bought at any gas company's office.

A little later a Home Fuel Committee will be appointed throughout the state, the work of which will be in charge of Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer, Chairman, who has been appointed to the State Fuel Committee by Governor Cox for this purpose. Unoubtedly a local Home Fuel Advisor will be appointed in Newton, who will be able to give valuable assistance in practical matters having to do with the use of fuel in the homes. In the meanwhile, it would be well for householders to do their part by obtaining necessary gas or kerosene stoves, and get the equipment now while half of our population is away on their vacations, rather than stand in line for these "helps to heat" later on when they all get back home.

A word to the wise is sufficient!" Our Newton citizens have generally been very thrifty and taken good care of themselves. We shall hope to see them do so this year in being prepared by many new ways to meet the fuel proposition that will be very acute later in the fall.

Yours very truly,
OLIVER M. FISHER,
Fuel Administrator, City of Newton.

ST. JAMES THEATRE—William Collier's success, "Nothing But the Truth" has been chosen as the opening play of the Boston Stock Co. which begins its 2nd season at the St. James Theatre, August 28th. The splendid record of this Company of last season establishes it as a permanent institution, the finest organization of its kind in the country. Both the press and the public were loud in their praise of its achievements and laud it as a worthy successor to the old Boston Museum.

The players of last year who have returned for their second season are: Walter Gilbert, Viola Roach, Mark Kent, Ralph Remley, Lucille Adams and Harold Chase. During the coming season at least five original productions will be produced for the first time on any stage with the ultimate view of presenting these plays on Broadway. This and many other innovations will serve to strengthen the favor of this popular Company with followers of the drama.

DO BEER AND WINE PREVENT DRUNKENNESS?

Not if history tells the truth. Distilled spirits were not even known, much less used, by the nations of western Europe until after 1,000 A. D., but drunkenness had been recorded of their peoples for centuries. Writers of almost 2,000 years ago described the beer with which the nations in the west of Europe "intoxicate themselves", and the often unspeakable wine-drinking scenes in the great nations of that day.

Spirits were not commonly used as beverages in England until the sixteenth century, but for nearly a thousand preceding years church officials had been issuing laws, decrees, and pastorals against drunkenness.

There is a Difference!

THE still-man at the refinery knows that there is a difference in various gasolines. So does the automotive engineer and the expert garage mechanic.

These are some of the "best results" that Socony's "uniform quality" insures: unvarying dependability, instant ignition, a quick start and pick-up, maximum power and high mileage per gallon. No gasoline can give you more.

TIBBETTS—LUCAS

Miss Ruth Lucas has left the employ of the Waltham Watch Co. to become the bride of Mr. Lorin Tibbetts of Winthrop.

She was given a very pretty bench decoration in yellow and white with golden rod and fern. There was also a little bride and groom ring-bearer to aid in the ceremony.

Last but not least was the present of a handsome mahogany mantle clock and cut glassware. The wedding will take place on Labor Day from the home of the bride.

Varnishing Airplanes.

It is contended that one feature of the airplane industry is more dangerous to workers than the actual work of flying the finished machines.

The indoor varnishing of the linen wings in order to make them waterproof and airproof involves the use of poisons which are often fatal to life under certain conditions.

The only safe place in which to do the varnishing appears to be out of doors.

Good Effect of Brief Absence.

I am not sure if the ladies understand the full value of the influence of absence, nor do I think it wise to teach them, lest they should resume the humor of the women of yore of sending their lovers into banishment. Distance, in truth, produces in ideal the same effect as in real perspective. Objects are softened and rounded and rendered doubly graceful; the harsher and more ordinary points of character are mellowed down and those which are remembered are the more striking outlines that mark sublimity, grace or beauty.—Walter Scott.
